Homosexual in CIA With Crime Record Preferred to Quit, Wherry Reports

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Yesterday's developments in the investigation of Senator McCarthy's charges produced the largest, most miscellaneous and least comprehensible crop of findings in any single day since the inquiry began.

They included:

1. A statement by McCarthy (R., Wis.) that his key witness, Louis F. Budenz, had named another man, with "high salary and high position" in the State Department, as a Communist. McCarthy said he was one of the nine or ten people he had previously publicly named to the investigating Senate subcommittee.

2. A revelation by Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.) that a man McCarthy had discovered to have a criminal record as a homosexual had preferred resignation from his high position at the Central Intelligence Agency. The CIA had no comment on the matter last night. The man's name has never been made public.

3. As angry a floor fight as the Senate has seen in many weeks, between Senators Jenner (R., Ind.) and Tydings (D., Md.) over the latter's procedure in running his investigation subcommittee. Jenner charged Tydings with operating a "whitewash."

4. A former Communist official—expelled from the Party because, it appeared, she and the Party could not see eye to eye on what the true Communist gospel ought to be—declaring that she never heard Communists mention Owen Lattimore as a Communist or friend of the Party. Lattimore is McCarthy's No. 1 target.

5. A missing witness— a former FBI informant who was reported to have feared "foul play" —failing to show up at a night hearing in response to a subpena. His pal, another former FBI agent, said he had not seen the man, John J. Huber, since a little after they checked into a Washington hotel about noon. Huber was apparently prepared to testify that Lattimore was at a party given by a Communist for an organization officially labelled subversive.

6. A decision to subpena, as future witnesses, two high potentates—one present, one past—of the Communist Party. One is Jack Stachel and the other is former American Party boss, Earl Browder. Budenz has testified that it was from them he was officially informed Lattimore was a Communist.

Chronologically, here are the day's events:

In the morning, Budenz settled

Navy Asks 'Go' On Atomic-Age Fleet Program

A-Power Sub, 3 Other New Craft Listed in $335-Million Program

By the United Press

The Navy yesterday asked Congress for immediate authority to begin building an "atomic age" fleet, including its long-awaited atom-powered submarine and three other radically new undersea craft.

The Navy's building plans were presented to the House Armed Services Committee by Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations. He said the program, which calls for both conversions and new construction, is part of a top-priority effort to modernize the fleet to meet changing world conditions.

But Sherman said that under present Defense Department plans the Navy will not ask for the actual money, 335 million dollars, to carry out the program until it submits its budget for fiscal 1952. The funds thus would become available on July 1, 1951.

Sherman testified in connection with a bill by Committee Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) authorizing 500 million dollars to start work on what he called an "atomic age" Navy.

He said the nuclear-powered submarine will cost 40 million dollars. His request was new evidence that this country is determined to beat Russia to the punch in developing such a craft.

The Navy's program also calls for three experimental type submarines, to be built at a combined cost of 50 million dollars. They include:

1. A tiny, 250-ton sub, about one-tenth the size of normal submarines and slightly bigger than the Japanese two-man submarine. It will cost three million dollars.

2. A "target and experimental" submarine that displaces 1100 tons and costs about 10 million dollars. Sherman gave no details of its design or function.

3. A 2200-ton experimental sub with a "closed cycle" power plant of a type too secret to discuss in public committee hearings. It will cost 37 million dollars.

Sherman said only that the "closed cycle" plant is one of a number of types of production with which the Navy has been experimenting. The Navy previously disclosed plans for a new engine using hydrogen peroxide to supply oxygen under water and thus avoid the necessity for frequent surfacing.

The program also calls for conversion of 11 existing submarines

1000 Debate Federal Load On Schools

Delegates Cite Problems Caused By U. S. Projects; H. C. Byrd Asks Aid

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Federal aid for school districts into which Government agencies have poured overwhelming school populations is on a par with aid to Europe's migratory populations, Harry C. Byrd, president of Maryland University, said last night.

Byrd spoke to 1000 delegates from 40 communities in 19 States, gathered here in behalf of Federal support for school construction and maintenance in communities affected by Government plants and agencies.

The meeting, held in Western High School auditorium, concluded with adoption of a resolution indorsing H. R. 8133 and H. R. 7940, which the House Labor and Education Committee has drawn to meet critical area needs.

Congressmen There

One provides for Federal aid for operation of schools in areas where Federal expansion has created a critical school situation. The second bill calls for Federal aid in school construction.

"If the Federal Government can afford to spend billions of dollars in Europe, meeting problems caused by great population movements, how can it not afford to spend a few millions of dollars solving the problems created by the movements of its own people?" Byrd asked.

Some of the migrations in this country, caused by Federal transfer of workers from area to area, are as involuntary as the European migrations imposed by Hitler, Byrd told the meeting.

Representative Cleveland M. Bailey (D., W. Va.) who introduced the bills was one of 14 members of Congress who attended the meeting.

Others there were Representative Leonard Irving (D., Mo.), Representative Thomas H. Burke (D., Ohio), Representative Roy W. Wier (D., Minn.), Representative Samuel K. McConnell, jr. (R., Pa.) and Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.).

States Represented

Also Representative L. Mendel Rivers (D., S. C.), Representative Henderson Lanham (D., Ga.), Representative Winfield K. Denton (D., Ind.), Representative John Murdock (D., Ariz.), Representative J. M. Combs (D., Tex.), Representative William M. Comer (D., Miss.), Representative Toby Morris (D., Okla.), and Representative James F. Lind (D., Pa.).

States represented by delegates were Maryland, Virginia, Florida, Ohio, California, Michigan, Mississippi, Illinois, South Carolina, Iowa, Kansas, Alabama, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Georgia, Oklahoma, Washington, West Virginia and Arizona.

From Oklahoma came seven women, all representing different schools in the community of Midwest City. Civic groups in their community raised funds to send

Committee Chairman Silent on Whether Frank Costello Also Has Been Subpenaed

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Big-time gamblers Joe Adonis and Frank Erickson have been subpenaed to testify before a Senate Commerce subcommittee on bills designed to break up interstate gambling.

But, said Chairman McFarland (D., Ariz.), in making the announcement last night, a doctor has signed an affidavit that Adonis is unable to make the trip here for at least 10 days. He now is in Hot Springs, Ark. And McFarland said he did not know if the legal paper had yet been served on Erickson in New York.

Asked if Frank Costello, often called the "Prime Minister of the Underworld," also had been subpenaed, McFarland said he would not want to comment on that now.

Carroll to Be Heard Today

The committee today will hear James J. Carroll of St. Louis, the country's unofficial "betting commissioner" who quotes odds on anything from a horse race to a presidential election. He was subpenaed and has promised to appear.

In announcing the calling of Adonis and Erickson, McFarland said "we're not any crime investigation." He said the committee would operate without "fanfare" in an effort to get facts on the interstate gambling business in order to better write proper legislation.

The names of Adonis and Erickson popped up earlier in the Senate hearings. Erickson was described by New York police officials as a "lay off" bettor and Adonis as "presumed to be a racketeer." A "lay off" bettor is one who takes big bets from smaller operators desirous of hedging or spreading their bets if too many are made on a single horse.

Interviewed By Folliard

In a recent series in The Washington Post, reporter Edward T. Folliard wrote of interviews he had with Adonis and Erickson.

Adonis, Folliard said, insisted his chief interest today is gambling casinos and operation of a fleet of trucks which deliver new cars to dealers. The Miami Crime Commission called him the "kingpin" of gambling in Broward County, just to the north of that city.

Erickson, Folliard reported, is "undisputed king of the bookmakers" and very rich. Once, when arrested for vagrancy, he produced securities worth $125,000

Omnibus Bill Total Grows

House Boosts Hospital Fund As Economy Drive Falters

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Congressional economy forces yesterday suffered another defeat as a House coalition restored every dollar recommended by the President for Federal hospital construction grants.

For the second straight day, the 29-billion-dollar omnibus appropriation bill wound up with more money instead of a cut.

By a teller vote of 125 to 66 the House added 75 million dollars in contract authority for new hospital construction to the Public Health Service section of the bill.

By only one vote it missed adding $1,450,000 more for administration of the program, a vote-getter in most members' districts.

The House Appropriations Committee had halved the Administration's original request for 150 million dollars in contract authority for the building program.

The House not only voted the full amount—Democratic and Republican sponsors of the increase warmly fought for the privilege of offering it.

As one result, the meager $7,700,000 floor saving in the big bill was wiped out entirely and a net increase of $67,300,000 was rung up in its place.

A billion dollars all told was sheared from the omnibus measure in committee before it was reported to the House last month, but Republicans are pledged to cut it at least another billion.

Following yesterday's setback, House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr. (Mass.) told newsmen he still hoped to cut the bill "substantially" in a single motion offered just before the final vote.

"But frankly, we are not doing so well at piecemeal cutting," Martin conceded. "Democrats won't

Civil Service Discloses 400 High-Pay Jobs

Log Jam of Promotions Broken; U. S. Posts in $11,200-14,000 Range

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The log jam on promotions to the Government's top-bracket jobs was finally broken yesterday when the Civil Service Commission announced the 400 classified positions to have salaries ranging from $11,200 to $14,000.

Congress passed the bill creating the 400 jobs last October. Hundreds of promotions have been delayed since that time until it could be determined how the 400 positions would be allocated. Besides the 400, scores of other employes will be promoted to higher salaries.

As expected, individual employes and officials alike were quick to criticize the list. Many of them had either failed to get one of the 400 jobs or they had been given a lower allocation than they expected.

Civil Service reminded its critics that more than 1000 persons were recommended by the agencies for the 400 jobs, and that disappointments had to be expected under the circumstances.

If the commission had had a free hand in classifying jobs to the three new grades, it was reported, several hundred additional employes would have been in them. However, in passing the law, Congress specified that a maximum of 25 jobs could be placed in GS-18 ($14,000); 75 jobs in GS-17 ($12,200 to $13,000) and

VA-FHA Loan Report Stirs Builder Group

Ending 'Disastrous,' President Wired; VA Denies Move

By Robert Jordan
Post Reporter

Possibility of an early end to the combination VA-FHA home loan caused a stir in the National Association of Home Builders yesterday, but was tossed aside by the Veterans' Administration.

The association wired President Truman and others that elimination of the combined loan at this time "would be disastrous."

It could result, the telegram asserted, in slashing by as much as 50 percent the number of new homes built and sold to veterans during the latter part of the year.

NAHB's alarm, declared Thomas P. Coogan, association president, stemmed from a remark by a VA official that the agency is considering "an early elimination" of the combined loan. By law, he pointed out, the combined loan may remain available through the end of the year.

Coogan said the remark came from T. B. King, chief of VA's home loan guaranty services. "We got very much alarmed," Coogan said. "We have had a hearing with them. VA listened—they were noncommittal."

A VA spokesman, however, denied that King had said VA is considering an early elimination of the combined loan.

What King did say, according to the spokesman, was that he was hoping to make a report to Veterans Administrator Carl R. Gray, jr., that would bring "an early determination" of what to do about the combined loan.

Now, VA reported, the FHA-GI loan represents about one third of the volume in veterans' loans. These loans are more costly and less advantageous to the borrower than the straight GI loan, according to VA.

Under the combined loan, FHA insures—at 4¼ percent interest—the veteran's first mortgage on his home. The remainder is guaranteed by VA at a straight 4 percent.

Trouble with the 4 percent interest rate, Coogan said, is "it isn't finding a market." In effect, he indicated, VA's participation in home financing for veterans would be virtually ruled out under the straight 4 percent rate.

Thus, he wired the President, to eliminate the combination loan to veterans "would create conditions no less than chaotic."

Phone Strike Called Off; Installers Stay Out

Nation-Wide Tieup Averted by Beirne; 250 Equipment Men Remain Idle Here

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The CIO Communications Workers of America yesterday called off a strike of 250,000 Bell System telephone workers, scheduled to begin at 6 a. m. today.

The union, however, threatened to continue for a third day a strike of 10,000 CWA installation workers against Western Electric, a Bell subsidiary.

The general strike, indefinitely postponed, was aimed at winning a new contract with improvements amounting to 15 cents an hour. The Western Electric installers' walkout seeks to attain union satisfaction for a series of grievances against the company.

250 Stay Idle Here

Locally, the Bell System strike deferral means that the 5500 union employes of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. will be at work today as usual. Continuation of the strike against Western Electric will keep around 250 union installation men idle here for a third day today.

Twice postponed before, in deference to requests by the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service and the White House, the CWA strike appeared to be "inevitable" —in the oft-reported phrase of the union leaders — until little more than 12 hours before the deadline.

Shortly after 5 p. m., yesterday, CWA President Joseph A. Beirne sent a wire from his headquarters here to the union's 25 affiliates around the country, as follows:

"Recent developments indicate possibility of an agreement in the present Bell System dispute. There will not be a strike on Wednesday, April 26. There are to be no picket lines until and unless authorized and set by the executive board."

Refuses to Elaborate

Beirne refused to expand on what he meant by "recent developments," but there were numerous reports in New York City, where key negotiations and mediation sessions were being held through the night, that an approach to settling the long and bitter contract dispute was being found.

In support of these reports was a statement by Robert T. Creasey, head of the union's long-distance lines division, that "we have reached an agreement with the company regarding the principles involved." He said the "biggest thing"—wages—had been resolved, and the settlement included a $5 weekly pay boost for some of the workers.

However, an official of the long lines department, American Telephone & Telegraph Co.—parent company of the Bell System—told reporters that "no settlement" had

Husband Slays Escort of Wife In Police Station

Princeton, W. Va., April 25 (AP). Frazier Harless, 24-year-old Bluefield, W. Va., truck driver, took another man's wife to a drive-in movie last night in his truck.

Her husband spied them.

Harless drove quickly to the Princeton police station for refuge. He and Mrs. Eva Carper, 30, scampered up the stairs to the desk sergeant's office. There were two shots.

Harless tumbled down the steps and died of wounds in the back.

"Sure, I killed him—and I'm not sorry," Patrolman A. E. French quoted Irving Carper, 36-year-old strip miner.

The husband is charged with murder.

Police Easily Nab Robbers, 8 and 13, Giddy From Loot

Two District youngsters—8 and 13—found out in a rather violent way last night that crime doesn't pay.

The pair broke into an auto in the 1600 block of Isherwood st. ne., police said, discovered both wine and cigars, and drank and smoked same at the scene.

Police found them shortly after 11 p. m., light-headed and deathly ill near the car, and took them to Casualty Hospital, where they were treated. They were held at the Ninth Precinct station for juvenile authorities today.

Kahn's Rembrandt Given to Aid 'Met'

New York, April 25 (NYHT).—Rembrandt's "Portrait of a Student" was donated to the Metropolitan Opera today by the heirs of the late Otto H. Kahn to help buy new scenery for next year's opera productions.

The painting, valued at $125,000 and never publicly exhibited in America, will be sold to the highest bidder between April 28 and May 10.

Rudolf Bing, general manager, disclosed today that the opening night opera would be Verdi's "Don Carlo," which hasn't been heard at the Metropolitan for 27 years.

Professor Kills Two Associates, Then Shoots Self

Peru, Nebr., April 25 (U.P.).—A mild-mannered psychology professor walked into the administration building of Peru State Teachers College today, calmly shot the president and the head of the education department to death, then left and took his own life.

County Attorney Fred C. Kieschel announced a verdict of double murder and suicide in the deaths of President William Nicholas, Dr. Paul Maxwell, and their assailant, Dr. Barney Baker.

Kieschel said Baker, 54, psychology professor at the small State school since 1926, left a note indicating that he was distraught about a notice of dismissal.

Police opened fire to quell a mass spear attack in an outlying native area near Lake Baringo in northnear Kenya. The tribesmen were led by a fanatical African leader of an outlawed religious sect who recently escaped jail.

Church 'Doesn't Fear' State

Bishop Calls on German Reds To Call Off Their Propaganda

Berlin, April 25 (AP).—Bishop Otto Dibelius, a Protestant leader, demanded tonight that the east German government desist from Communist propaganda and restore full civil liberties to all the people.

"The church wishes no fight with the state authority, but it does not fear it, either," Bishop Dibelius said in a letter to Communist Chancellor Otto Grotewohl.

The bishop heads the Evangelical Churches in which 14 million of east Germany's 18 million citizens are members. The simmering antagonism between the church and the Communist government burst open Sunday.

At that time Evangelical pastors in more than 4000 churches read an "open word" from their bishops denouncing Communist pressure to force Protestants into the so-called "National Front," and charging that schools and youth organizations were being used to turn German children into atheists.

By reading the communication, pastors made themselves liable to punishment by death or imprisonment.

Grotewohl immediately declared the proclamation an "attack on the constitution, the government, and the republic."

A decisive phase in the struggle may come Friday, when Bishop Dibelius and Grotewohl are to confer.

Performers' Demand for Pay Keeps Shrine Circus Off TV

The show must go on—but if it goes on before television cameras the performers want extra pay.

Because of this, WOIC had hastily to cancel plans to televise the matinee performance of the Shrine Circus yesterday at Uline Arena.

Jack Hardesty, WOIC publicist, said the American Guild of Variety Artists demanded one-seventh of a week's pay for the more than 70 performers in the circus if they worked before television cameras.

"We figured roughly that this would cost $700 or $800," said Hardesty. "We couldn't afford it, so we canceled the program."

Hardesty said the station was donating two hours time as a public service. He said Cherner Motors, while not paying for the station time, would have been credited as the sponsor, because it had agreed to pick up the tab for engineer's overtime, setting up of equipment, and telephone line charges.

Julius B. Gay, Illustrious Potentate of Almas Temple, sponsor of the Shrine Circus, said:

"We agreed to let them (WOIC) televise the circus if they got clearance from the American Guild of Variety Artists."

Almas Temple, said Gay, was not to receive any payment for permitting the circus to be televised.

Army Developing Rocket Effective Over 60,000 Feet

By the United Press

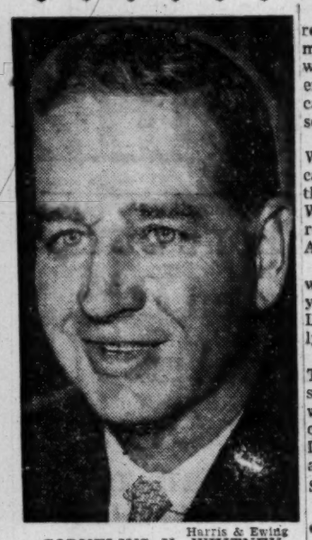
Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, disclosed last night the Army is developing antiaircraft rockets able to knock out bombers flying higher than 60,000 feet.

That is higher by at least 2 miles than any bomber flies today.

Collins also revealed progress on a guided missile "which gives promise of destroying attacking planes at even greater ranges" than the rockets. He also told of development of a "radical" anti-tank weapon that might change "the whole concept of tank warfare."

In a radio interview, he said the new rockets are in "advanced stages of development."

Whitney Hits Shifts Of Security Risks



Harris & Ewing
CORNELIUS V. WHITNEY
Wants to fire "poor risks"

Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, retiring Undersecretary of Commerce, said yesterday it is "eye wash" to think Government workers classed as poor security risks can simply be transferred to less sensitive jobs.

Whitney made this comment to White House reporters after a call on President Truman at which the Chief Executive accepted Whitney's previously announced resignation. It will be effective April 30.

Whitney has differed publicly with Secretary of Commerce Sawyer over the case of Michael J. Lee, a department official currently under fire in the Senate.

Whitney said he called on Mr. Truman to urge the President to support pending legislation which would let other Government agencies besides the State and Defense Department fire workers classed as poor risks but not as disloyal.

Silent on Truman's View

He called this a gap in the Government's security program which needs to be filled. But he declined to say what response he received from the President.

Whitney said there is a tendency to feel this problem can be solved by transfering poor security risks to "other jobs across the hall, where, theoretically, the individual is safe."

"In my opinion this is eye wash. Such individuals must be separated from Government service altogether. All Government agencies today deal with secret information. Therefore such legislation should cover all agencies."

Whitney appeared as a witness last month at a Senate Commerce subcommittee hearing into Lee's fitness to hold his job as chief of the Far Eastern Division of the Commerce Department's Office of International Trade.

No Decision Reached

At that time, Whitney said Sawyer personally decided that "no security restrictions" should be placed on Lee. Whitney added that on the basis of what he had heard of Lee he would not himself put Lee "in a position where he might gossip."

Lee's case was put before the Senate Committee by Senator Malone (R., Nev.) who has demanded a full-scale investigation. No decision was reached on Malone's demand.

Whitney said yesterday his views on Lee and the security program had nothing to do with his resignation. He said he is leaving Government service to return to his private business affairs, including mining, lumber and farming interests.

Rebuffs Governor

Rabbi Keeps Crime Data For Jurors

Kansas City, April 25 (AP). — Gov. Forrest Smith, saying it was his responsibility to clear up the "Kansas City situation," today asked Rabi Samuel S. Mayerberg for "information other than hearsay to justify your suspicions" about the Kansas City police.

Rabbi Mayerberg, replying to the Governor's letter, declined to mention names except before a grand jury which can "give immunity to witnesses and can receive from you protection they ought to have."

Mayerberg long has been a militant critic of law enforcement in Kansas City and of machine politics. His criticism has become particularly sharp since the gang-style killings April 6 of Charles Binaggio, Northside Democratic leader, and Charles Gargotta, a former convict and Binaggio's muscleman.

In the 1930s Mayerberg was outspoken against the notorious Democratic machine which ruled Kansas City with little opposition until its boss, the late Tom Pendergast, was sent to prison on income tax charges and Federal agents moved in to clean up the city.

"Unfortunately," the fighting churchman wrote today, "though I trust you, I feel that I cannot give you the information I have because you, in turn, would have to give the information to people whom you may trust but in whom I have no confidence whatsoever.

"If I mention names and places to you I would literally be putting people 'on the spot.'

"That is too dangerous because when we deal with the underworld we are dealing with a vicious and murderous gang."

Coy, FCC Head, Won't Serve Another Term

Wayne Coy said yesterday he had "no intention of being available for reapointment" as chairman of the Federal Communications Commission (FCC). His term expires June 30, 1951.

Coy said he will leave the post while testifying to the Senate expendtiures in behalf of President Truman's plan to reorganize the FCC.

The plan would vest responsibility for the day-to-day administration of the agency in the chairman, instead of the full commission.

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) has introduced a resolution to disapprove it and similar plans for the Interstate Commerce, Federal Power and Federal Trade Commissions. He contends they would be turned into "one-man" agencies by increased authority for the chairmen.

Coy said he thinks the plan strikes a "nice balance" between too much authority for the chairman and too little. He said too much authority might permit a chairman to dominate a commission, but that too little means the commission must devote too much energy to "time-consuming details."

Commissioner E. M. Webster also backed the plan. He said it would "save my time as a commissioner and get better administrative results."

Naturalization Cases Probed For Perjurers

The Justice Department is getting ready for some wholesale actions to revoke the citizenship of naturalized Americans suspected of taking their oaths of allegiance with fingers crossed.

President Truman disclosed the plan in an address before the Federal Bar Association Monday night on steps to protect the internal security of the Nation. He said over 1000 such cases are being investigated in connection with subversive activities.

Justice Department officials said later, in response to an inquiry, that the cases of 1073 ex-alien citizens are under inquiry to determine if they got their American papers by perjury, or by withholding required information, or took the naturalization oath with mental reservations.

In most of the cases, Communist Party membership or affiliation is involved. It was indicated that court actions will get under way shortly. Successful denaturalization proceedings would return defendants to the status of an alien, subject to deportation if the Government desired it.

The process to be followed is similar to that used in the recent Harry Bridges trial at San Francisco, where the CIO longshore union leader was convicted of falsely denying Communist connections to become naturalized in 1945. Bridges is a native of Australia. Revocation of his United States citizenship has been asked.

Budenz Names High State Aide

down to an examination from members of the Tydings' subcommittee, in closed session. He had been heard last week in open sessions.

McCarthy and Lattimore, and his lawyer, Abe Fortas, showed up yesterday morning to sit in, in accordance with a previous agreement. After a while, and before Budenz testified, they were asked to leave the room, the subcommittee having changed its mind.

McCarthy later charged to reporters that Lattimore had been promised a transcript of the hearings, while he would not be given one.

No Such Decision, Tydings Says

Tydings said no such decision on the transcript had been made. Whether anyone outside the subcommittee will get a record of the testimony remains to be decided.

The closed hearing resumed after lunch. In mid-afternoon, Jenner took the floor. In singularly bitter words he launched an attack on Tydings.

The first accusation was that Tydings, who had always opposed "star chamber' proceedings, was at that very moment conducting one, and not allowing the accuser, McCarthy, to be present when his own witness testified.

Next he said, Tydings was the first sponsor of Secretary of State Dean Acheson for a Government job, in 1933.

Thirdly, Tydings was involved in what Jenner chose to call "Interlocking Directorate of Whitewash, Inc.," other members including Seth W. Richardson, chairman of the Loyalty Review Board, and Leon L. Tyler, as assistant counsel of Tydings subcommittee.

Pearl Harbor Probe

Richarson, said Jenner, was counsel for the committee that whitewashed the Pearl Harbor Investigation and Tyler was a member of the investigating staff that whitewashed David Lilienthal when he was up for confirmation as Atomic Energy Commission chairman.

About this point, McCarthy jumped into the floor discussion with the statement that Budenz had "put the finger" on one of the men McCarthy had previously accused, as a Communist. He was in a very high State Department job, McCarthy declared.

McCarthy noted in his speech to the Senate that President Truman said Monday night there were no known Communists in the Government.

He suggested that Mr. Truman ask Senator Tydings for a transcript of the closed session with Budenz. Tydings, Maryland Democrat, is chairman of the subcommittee.

Subcommittee members, interviewed later, declined to discuss Budenz' disclosures but were pointedly undisturbed and unexcited about the latest alleged corroboration of McCarthy's charges.

Tydings Called to Floor

About this time Democratic colleagues called Tydings from his subcommittee hearing to the Senate floor. He arrived to hear the last part of some of Jenner's remarks about him.

Mocking Jenner's windmill flailing of the arms, he suggested the Indianian not speak until he knew what he was talking about. More angry words ensued until Senator Lodge (R., Mass.), a member of the subcommittee, intervened to tell a story of committee procedure that generally backed that described by Tydings.

The closed sessions, it appeared, were at his, not Tydings' instance. The ejection of McCarthy, however, appeared to be Tydings' doing, though later it was backed by a split subcommittee vote.

The debate went on to the question of homosexuals in the Government, with Jenner alluding to the "New Deal and Fair Deal and Fairy Deal."

Jenner proposed a trade—Tydings' report on what has been done about the homosexual for McCarthy's names.

"I realize the great desire to shift from Communist to homosexuals," Tydings snapped.

"I don't know which is worse, do you?" Jenner came back.

Still later, just before the Senate adjourned, Wherry reported that the CIA official, formerly in the State Department, had submitted his resignation, and that more resignations would follow.

McCarthy Submitted Name

McCarthy had submitted the name of the man, in secret, to the Tydings subcommittee some weeks ago, after declaring that he had a police record and had been given to "hanging around" the men's room in Lafayette Park.

Last evening the CIA duty officer said he had read the news ticker report of developments in respect to the official, but was in "no position' to refer the matter to his superiors.

He added, according to a New York Herald Tribune reporter:

"It doesn't call for that kind of action. It's too trivial. It can wait until tomorrow.'

Questioned at the end of the afternoon about the day's testimony, Tydings refused to comment on Budenz' testimony, particularly the alleged new revelation. Budenz was in the committee room and newsmen turned their questions to him.

"You don't want to answer that, do you?" said Tydings to Budenz.

Budenz said he didn't.

Who Leaked to McCarthy

Later, Tydings said he didn't know how any such leaks got to McCarthy, who was not there, of course, during Budenz' testimony.

A reporter wisecracked that he could think of five different ways—alluding to the five different members of the subcommittee.

Tydings, who got the inference, said, "I don't believe any member of the committee would give that sort of information to McCarthy. They are all men of honor."

That left only two people who culd have told McCarthy—Subcommittee Counsel Edward Morgan, or Budenz himself.

Came the evening hearings, in the Senate Caucus room, jampacked with a curious audience.

The witness was Bella V. Dodd, a dark, portly middle-aged woman with an easy presence and a fluent flow of words.

She described how she entered the Communist party late in 1943, and became a member of the National Committee in 1944. She stayed there until expelled in June, 1949, for differences of opinion which, in later cross-examination, she never made very specific.

"Never Met Lattimore"

But, she said, "I am not now a member of the Communist Party and I have no ties with it whatsoever." Turning to the question of the Johns Hopkins' professor's alleged association with the Communists, she said:

"I have never met Owen Lattimore. In all my association with the Communist Party I never heard his name mentioned by party leaders or members of the party, either as a party member or as a fellow traveler or even as a friend of the party.

"Since this controversy started, however, I have read Owen Lattimore's two most recent books, namely, 'Solution in Asia,' published in 1945, and 'The Situation in Asia,' published in 1949. To me, these are scholarly works.

"However, I must call your attention to the fact that neither of these books represents the Communist position on China. Anyone who thinks that they do, either has not read the books, or is a political illiterate—or has a special stake in creating confusion.

Capitalistic View

"If you read the books, you will find that Owen Lattimore makes a plea, as a capitalist, for an orderly relationship with China so that trade with American business can rapidly be established. Lattimore calls for a building of a Chinese middle class and like all those who established capitalism in the western world a century and a half ago. Lattimore is impatient with the backwardness of the feudal regime represented by the Kuomintang and Chiang Kai-shek.

"Lattimore calls for a program much like that followed by the British in India. This position is contrary to the Communist position. Indeed, it is anathema to the Communists."

"Guilt by Association"

Dr. Dodd next took out after the theory of "guilt by association," which she ascribed to Budenz as his major tactic in incriminating other people as Communists.

She herself, she noted, had been in contact in various legislative affairs with New York Senators Ives (R.) and Lehman (D., Governor Tom Dewey and the lieutenant governor of the State. Did that make them Communists, she asked.

As for Budenz himself, she went on, she recalled he was sent to Chicago in 1937 and did not return to New York until 1940. How, then, could he have been present at the meeting he described where Lattimore was dubbed a Communist or coworker?

As for his assertion that he got the name from Jack Stachel, along with 100 others he was supposed to memorize, that was "laughable to anyone who knows the Party," since Stachel was assigned to trade union matters, not to informing Budenz on Party workers.

Directives from Browder

Directives came not from him, but from Browder, she said. Besides, she challenged Budenz to memorize in one month 1000 names she would pick at random from a phone book.

Budenz' story that Lattimore was referred to by the initials "L" or "XL" in party memoranda was "playing cops and robbers with a vengence." Nor could he have been in a Communist "cell' in the Institute of Pacific Relations, she said, for cells or party fractions were abolished in 1939.

The IPR itself, she continued, was not thought of highly by the Communists. Chinese Communists to whom she had once talked about it told her it was "a vehicle for either British or American intelligence."

A long period of questioning set in, mostly by subcommittee Counsel Morgan and Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), to the delight of an absorbed audience.

The questions were designed to bring out Dr. Dodd's present political beliefs and wherein she differed from the Communist Party.

She said she thought it too narrow, too confined, too unwilling to work with other, bigger groups ever to accomplish the aims of peace or economic security and progress. As for herself, she was as ardent a Socialist as ever she was.

She declined to denounce Russia or even the Communist Party in overall terms.

By the time she finished it was perfectly clear that Hickenlooper, and many others, probably thought she never should have been kicked out of the Communist Party.

Her testimony concluded, the first of two witnesses requested by McCarthy took the stand. He was Lawrence E. Kerley, 36, a former FBI agent. He said that at present he is on the editorial staff of the New York Journal American, specializing in Communist activities.

He testified that as an FBI clerk in 1939 he recorded the engagement of John J. Huber, the man who was to be the second witness, as an undercover informer for the FBI, to work in Communist groups in New York.

Huber would testify, Kerley said, that in 1946 he was at a party in the home of "millionaire Communist" Frederick V. Field for a Far East propaganda outfit branded by the Attorney General as subversive.

Tydings interrupted to say that the story better be told by Huber himself.

Kerley said Huber was not present. It was never brought out how he knew Huber was not there and why he seemed to know Huber would not be present, and hence wanted to put the story in the record himself.

Tydings interrupted to call for Huber. No answer.

Kerley said the two men had come down together on a plane yesterday from New York, spent the morning in McCarthy's offices, checked into the Carlton Hotel about noon, and then Huber went out for lunch. Kerley said he had not seen Huber since.

Phone calls from the Caucus room failed to locate him.

The hearing was concluded. Kerley said later, that Huber had feared "foul play" and told him that last Saturday night he had been set upon in the Bronx by thugs with knives.

The Washington Post, meanwhile, was told by a local informant that the knife fracas was in Washington, about a week ago. The Carlton Hotel told The Post Huber had never checked in with Kerley, but had been expected.

Late last night, Lattimore's lawyers issued the following statement:

"Owen Lattimore stated that he has never been a member of (the subversive organization Kerley named) that he has never attended a meeting of any kind at the home of Frederick Vanderbilt Field; and that he does not remember being in Mr. Field's house on any occasion or at any time during the year 1946.

"Mr. Lattimore said, 'Senator McCarthy seems to have as much difficulty in finding his own witness as he has in locating Communists'."

The subpenas for Stachel and Browder call for their appearance before the subcommittee at 10:30 a. m. today. But as of last night, Tydings said his group had been unable to locate either one to serve the subpenas.

Maragon Case Lawyers Row Over Failure to Call Vaughan

By the United Press

The perjury trial of John Maragon, one-time White House frequenter, drew to a close yesterday with Government and defense attorneys blaming each other for not calling Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, President Truman's military aide, to testify.

Defense Counsel Irvin Goldstein told the Federal court jury the Government "failed in its duty" by not calling Vaughan to back up its charges that Maragon lied to a Senate subcommittee investigating so-called "5 percenters."

Prosecutor Charles B. Murray replied that it was up to the defense to call Vaughan—"He is in their stable." If any of the Government attorneys "called him on the telephone, he'd probably hang up," Murray said.

Vaughan testified before the subcommittee in connection with its investigation of Maragon's alleged "influence" peddling. He said then that Maragon would have to be "fumigated" before he could come around the executive mansion again.

After the prosecution and defense finished their summations—concentrating mainly on Vaughan's failure to testify—the jury was ordered to appear in court at 10 a. m. today to receive instructions from Judge Jennings Bailey. Then they will retire to reach a verdict.

Maragon, who is accused of lying to the Senators about details of his job and income, faces a maximum sentence of 30 years if convicted on all three counts of the indictment. The Government dropped a fourth count.

Goldstein asked the jury to give Maragon, whom he referred to as "the little fellow," a break and not let him "be trampled on by people in high places."

Noting that the Government claimed Maragon went from one Federal agency to another representing himself as an agent for Vaughan, Goldstein pounded the jury-box rail and shouted:

"If what Maragon said about that was a falsification, everybody who knows it to be false would be clamoring to get on the witness stand. But there was not a single whisper from anyone—not a single whisper from the only person in the United States who can tell you about it — Gen. Harry Vaughan."

Then he accused the Government of failing in its duty by not calling the general because he could "answer the qustion everybody has in mind."

Murray replied by asking why the defense did not call Vaughan if they thought his testimony would be helpful.

"Mr. Maragon is the man to whom General Vaughan is available, if he is available at all," Murray said.

Goldstein said one Government witness, Milton R. Polland of Milwaukee, gave Maragon a $500 check as a political contribution for the Democratic Party in Missouri. Polland testified the money was an expense fee to the defendant for representing a New Jersey firm.

Murray conceded Polland may have committed perjury, but said this "does not knock down payment of a second $500" to Maragon. Polland testified he gave Maragon three checks.

Murray said the Government is not trying to prove Maragon "an all-round rascal," and added:

"He may be one. All we're asking you to do is to find him guilty of perjury."

Goldstein also wanted to know why the Government had not subpenaed William Rogers, former chief counsel of the "Five Percenter" Investigating Committee, now in private law practice here. He said Rogers asked "99 percent" of the questions put to Maragon on the day he is supposed to have lied.

To Break Silence

Red Probers Plan Witness Prosecution

By the United Press

The House Committee on Un-American Activities is planning a "test case" to see if it can prosecute witnesses who refuse to say whether they are Communists because their answers might be self-incriminating.

Representative E. Walter (D., Pa.) acting committee chairman, yesterday said, he would ask the House to cite for contempt 39 "rebellious witnesses" who refused to testify at hearings on Communist activities in Hawaii.

The committee returned here Sunday from a nine-day hearing in Honolulu on Communist activities in the islands. Of 66 scheduled witnesses, 39 refused to say whether they were Communists.

If the test case in the Hawaiian investigation is successful, Walter said other reluctant witnesses would be prosecuted, including Steve Nelson, Communist organizer in western Pennsylvania.

Romulo Fears War Closer Than It Seems

New York, April 25 (U.P.).—Brig. Gen. Carlos P. Romulo of the Philippines warned tonight, on the fifth anniversary of the United Nations, that war may be closer than it seems.

"Mankind cannot live indefinitely under the Damocletian sword of the cold war," Romulo said. "There is a limit to the strain to which international relations can be subjected by the tensions and pressures of the global struggle that is now consuming the greater part of the time, energy and resources of the great powers. Already there are danger signals warning us that the breaking point may be closer than we have calculated it to be."

The statements were made in a speech prepared for delivery at a U. N. anniversary reception under auspices of the American Association for the United Nations.

The dynamic little Filipino called on "men of good will" everywhere to "rally behind" Secretary-General Trygve Lie, now on a European trip that will include conferences with top diplomats, including perhaps a fateful talk with Josef Stalin.

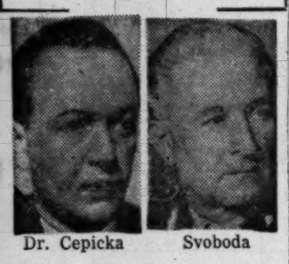
Romulo, president of the fourth U. N. General Assembly, reiterated his support of Lie's campaign to call a special Security Council meeting of Foreign Ministers or chiefs of state to end the crippling Soviet U. N. boycott and go on to tackle major issues in the East-West cold war.

"The cold war," Romulo warned, "must be liquidated before it turns into a 'hot' war which, if fought with the new weapons of mass destruction, could very well 'liquidate' mankind."

Romulo said the fifth anniversary of the U. N. was a "particularly appropriate occasion" for renewing the appeal to the big powers to ease world tension. For, he said, it was at San Francisco five years ago that they were given special responsibility for maintaining world peace.

Czech Shakeup

High Cabinet Post Given To Cepicka



Dr. Cepicka Svoboda

Prague, April 25 (A.P.).—Gen. Ludvik Svoboda, listed in parliamentary archives as a Catholic, was replaced as Minister of Defense today by Alex Cepicka, who spearheaded the Czech government's drive against the Catholic Church hierarchy.

Cepicka is the son-in-law of President Klement Gottwald.

The shift was one of several cabinet changes announced by the official Czech news agency, CTK, which said the general was given a new job at his "own request."

Svoboda commanded Czech army units in Russia during World War II. He joined the Communist Party only after it came to power here in February, 1948. He had been Defense Minister since the liberation from the Germans in 1945.

He was given new jobs as deputy premier and director of the State Office for Physical Culture and Sport.

In other cabinet shifts, Vice Premier Zdenek Fierlinger, a former Socialist, was appointed to succeed Cepicka as Minister of Church Affairs. Stefan Vais, chief of Gottwald's secretariat, was named to take Cepicka's other vacated post, Minister fo Justice.

Vaclav Kopecky, Minister of Information, was relieved of a second job he had held, director of Physical Culture and Sports, to make way for Svoboda.

The news agency said the changes were made by Gottwald on the recommendation of Premier Antonin Zapotocky.

Hearings Ordered On New Airport For Washington

A House subcommittee yesterday ordered hearings held on the Senate-approved bill to authorize a second major commercial airport for Washington.

The decision to conduct hearings in the near future was announced by Chairman Lindley Beckworth (D., Tex.) of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Subcommittee, to which the Senate bill was sent. Beckworth said the date for the hearings has not yet been set.

to Snorkel types, or the kind that can breathe underwater through a Dutch-developed tube to the surface. The Snorkel device was taken over by the Germans during the war.

In all, 112 vessels would be built, most of them small or auxiliary craft, at a total cost of 129 million dollars. The rest of the money would go for conversions.

Under questioning, Sherman said the Russians are known to have more than 270 submarines of all classes.

Three other submarines would be converted to "killer subs" for antisubmarine warfare. In addition, the program calls for construction of one mine-laying submarine, conversion of three mine sweepers to "sweep the latest types of mines in shallow water," conversion of one cruiser to a launching platform for guided missiles, and the modernization of one carrier.

O'Conor Sees Peril to U. S. In ECA Slash

Maryland's junior Senator, Herbert R. O'Conor (D.), warned yesterday that cuts in Marshall Plan funds might endanger the security of the United States.

O'Conor urged the Senate to vote the full amount sought by the Administration, although Senator James P. Kem (R., Mo.) with the support of Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) submitted an amendment to slash a billion dollars from the total.

The bill before the Senate calls for $3,366,450,000 in foreign aid, including $3,100,000,000 for the third year of the Marshall Plan in Europe.

"We should not forget," O'Conor said, "that the Communists have taken on renewed confidence in Europe, due to Red victories in China and the anticipated end of the European Recovery Program. For that reason our aid, even though in reduced amount, is just as vital now as it was in 1948.

"We refused to vote too little then. Let me urge you to refuse to do so now. We are more than half-way on the road to victory in Europe, and it is unthinkable that we shall fail now."

Both O'Conor and Senator Herbert H. Lehman (D., N. Y.) stressed the need of American technical help for underdeveloped areas under the so-called Point Four program, for which the Administration has asked for 45 million dollars. Last month the House slashed the figure to 25 million, including 10 million for existing technical assistance programs.

Senator Taft, urging sharp cut in the Marshall Plan funds, thought the request for Great Britain was at least 200 million dollars too high in view of the budget surplus reported this month by Sir Stafford Cripps, the British Chancellor of the Exchequer.

"I'm sure that the bill can be cut and still accomplish its purposes—whether by a billion and a half, a billion or half a billion, I don't know," Taft said. "If there is a deficit in the British balance of payments, I am certain that it will be smaller than the Administration estimated a few months ago."

The first test vote on the proposed cuts had to be postponed for another day because of the renewed flare-up of debate over loyalty in the State Department.

Missing 3-Pound Baby Found In N. Y. Hotel; Maid Charged

New York, April 25 (A.P.).—A premature baby, snatched from a Bronx hospital nearly a month ago and later feared dead, today was found alive and thriving in an incubator rigged up by her accused kidnaper.

A young mother, heartbroken by the death of her own twin babies, was charged with the kidnaping.

Tiny Chaneta Holden, who weighed only 2 pounds, 11 ounces when stolen, had gained six ounces since she vanished on the night of March 30.

An 18-year-old chambermaid who, police said, lavished the tender care of a real mother on Chaneta, was charged with the kidnaping.

Mrs. Evelyn Jane Jordan was quoted by police as saying she took the child to ease her heartbreak over the death of twins born prematurely to her two months ago.

The frail child was found in a nursery fitted out in the storeroom of a mid-Manhattan hotel. It was just across the corridor from a room occupied by Mrs. Jordan and her husband.

Mrs. Jordan was trapped last night by a chance meeting with another woman in a department store. Mrs. Beatrice Vernon, police said, recognized her as the woman to whom she gave blankets and clothing on the night the baby was stolen.

Mrs. Jordan's arrest capped a police and FBI hunt that spread over several States and as far south as Washington, D. C. and Winchester, Va.

Spring Storm Brings Snow To Midwest

Chicago, April 25 (U.P.).—A spring storm buffeted flood-stricken North Dakota and Minnesota with heavy snow and high winds today, while new floods hit Iowa, Nebraska, Indiana and Illinois.

As much as 16 inches of snow piled up in North Dakota, and a stinging wind and subfreezing cold increased the suffering of homeless in the State's worst flood of the century. The storm extended across Minnesota to Duluth, Minn., and Superior, Wis., keeping school children home.

The Red Cross reported 6500 families homeless in North Dakota and Minnesota.

Ten inches of snow blanketed northern Wisconsin, driven by winds of 50 to 75 miles an hour.

Rain covered the Ohio Valley and fell in a narrow band southward through Kentucky and Tennessee to the Gulf.

Sinclair, Wyo., reported the Nation's low of 13 degrees above zero. Weathermen in Kansas warned orchardists to prepare against frost.

The Missouri River broke through a levee at South Sioux City, Nebr., and rolled over 650 acres of farmland. Three Army boats sped to the scene.

In Iowa, high winds drove the Missouri over Highway 75, near Blencoe, inundating 800 acres of farmland.

Plane Wheel Found in Baltic

Stockholm, April 25 (U.P.).—An airplane wheel punctured by what is believed to be a machine-gun bullet was brought in from the Baltic Sea tonight by Swedish fishermen.

The wheel, equipped with a Firestone tire and bearing an April, 1949 English-language inspection plate on the shock absorber, may have come from a United States Navy Privateer patrol bomber missing with 10 men aboard. It disappeared April 8 and, according to the United States Government, was shot down by the Russians over the open sea.

Customs authorities said the wheel rim was punctured by what was "evidently a machine-gun bullet" but were not sure if the tire also had bullet holes.

Fishermen delivered the wheel to customs authorities at Burgsvik on Gotland Island which lies between Sweden and the coast of the Soviet-held Baltic republics. Russia asserted that its airmen fired on an American military plane which crossed this coast April 8.

Earlier today, the captain of the Swedish trawler Larex reported to the government that a Russian mine sweeper chased his ship for miles in the Baltic from a point off the Polish coast in an apparent attempt to seize ie on the high sea.

U. S. Planning to Teach Public How to Detect Atomic Rays

The Government is launching a Nation-wide program to train civilians in handling instruments which detect the presence of deadly atomic rays.

The intended scope of the program, designed to aid in home-front defense in time of war, was discussed yesterday by Paul J. Larsen, director of the Office of Civilian Mobilization.

In a statement prepared for high-level courses in radiological monitoring at Brookhaven National Laboratory, Brookhaven, N. Y.; Oak Ridge National Laboratory, Oak Ridge, Tenn., and the University of California at Los Angeles, Larsen said:

"Such monitoring services must be provided in order to protect the lives of firemen, policemen, rescue workers and others. . . . They also must be provided to permit sound decisions on the evacuation of persons whose continued presence in a radiologically contaminated area threatens to make them casualties."

Every State Represented

Atomic radiation experts representing every State are attending the courses at the nuclear laboratories. They are being trained to organize and instruct civilian defense workers in their home States.

"The second group of courses to train local instructors, and particularly the third group of courses to train a number of local monitors, will require many months of planning on both your part and ours, followed by many more months of actual training work," Larsen said.

He described radiological monitoring as "a new civil defense activity which became essential with the advent of nuclear weapons.

"It is an extremely important adjunct to the extensive services being planned to prevent further—and frequently needless—loss of life and property following wartime disasters."

Larsen said the "most important immediate function" of the scientists attending the present courses is to guide Governors and State civil defense authorities in order to prevent waste of resources and to assure "an eventually sound, adequate civil defense monitoring service."

He cautioned against "precipitate action" by local governing bodies in buying untried monitoring instruments, and added:

"Some decisions stil have to be made concerning organization of monitoring services; instruments with high measuring ranges must be developed."

Larsen also urged caution on the part of the scientists in public statements. "Nothing can be more damaging to public morale than a mass of conflicting statements from recognized experts," he said.

Larsen said the "seeming haste" in which the top-level training courses were organized was not "an indication of imminence of a national emergency" but resulted from recognition of the time it would take to organize and train an adequate number of monitors.

He suggested that the scientists attending the courses:

1. Offer their services now as "advisers to your State Governors and civil defense directors."

2. Do not start the second group of courses "until we have mutually agreed" through your Governors on an appropriate time.

3. Keep the civilian mobilization office advised of technical problems and suggestions "so that we may have a mutually beneficial exchange of ideas."

Chinese Reds Try Defenses Of Chusans

Hongkong, April 25 (U.P.).—The Communists won control of virtually all of Hainan Island today and began probing the defenses of the Chusan Islands, site of the Nationalists' major air and naval base 90 miles southeast of Shanghai.

A Nationalist air force communique said its planes bombed and strafed Communist positions in some of the Chusan Islands only a few miles from Tinghai, the port from which the Nationalists' crippling coastal blockade is carried out.

The communique said planes hit 30 two-masted wooden boats off one of the Chusans, more tran 100 junks along the nearby mainland coast and another group of 40 junks northeast of the main naval base. It claimed most of the junks were sunk.

Communist broadcasts have set an invasion timetable calling for early occupation of Hainan followed by attacks on the Chusans and then the major assault on Formosa, Chiang Kai-shek's last retreat some 500 miles south of the Chusans.

Reports from Hainan said the Nationalists evacuated their last air base on the southern coast Monday night and that guerilas merely were waiting a signal to occupy Sanya, the air field, and nearby Yulin, the temporary island defense headquarters.

All high officials already have fled, and occupation of Sanya and Yulin would give the Red armies control of all major points on the island.

Two large shipments of arms and reinforcements arrived in Hoihow, the island capital, unchallenged, Communists said.

U. S. Troops Rehearse for Berlin Reds

Berlin, April 25 (A.P.).—A battalion of United States infantrymen with fixed bayonets drove back a theoretical mob of 40,000 Berlin Communists today in a smoke-wreathed exercise in the Grunewald, west Berlin's park.

The smoke, harmless clouds from smokepots, represented tear gas.

The Communist mob was impersonated by 800 jeering United States constabulary troopers.

Gen. Thomas T. Handy, United States commander in chief in Europe, and Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, Berlin commander, watched the exercise. It was one of a series of tests of Allied military preparedness to cope with possible disorders when East Germany's Communist youth march on Berlin for a unity demonstration in May.

As the line of bayonets advanced, an American Army loudspeaker truck sounded: "Retire peaceably to your homes—or you will be hurt." Two Army fire trucks drew up as reinforcements as the battalion set out to clear the last of the mob from "Tulip Platz," an imaginary square adjoining the Russian sector.

British and French troops are to join the Americans in quelling any trouble the 11,000 west Berlin police are unable to handle.

Leopold Upsets Compromise, Rejects Pledge to Stay Away

Brussels, April 25 (A.P.).—King Leopold III upset plans for a compromise on Belgium's royal issue today. He rejected a Socialist demand that he pledge himself in writing to stay out of the country during the proposed temporary rule of his son, Prince Baudouin.

Both the Socialists and the Liberals decided not to go along with the compromise, which was backed by Paul Van Zeeland, the Social Christian premier-designate.

Thus the nation's three major political parties dropped into another deadlock. The Liberals said, however, "negotiations should now be concluded on conditions ensuring Prince Paudouin effective exercise of the royal prerogatives."

The Socialist position was set forth by the party president, Max Buset. He told reporters:

"The Socialists demanded precision on one point. The king refused to give any. I did not convene the official committee of the party, but I contacted several of its members and they gave me their unanimous approval to answer 'no' (to the compromise)."

The statement from the exiled monarch was addressed to Premier-designate Van Zeeland, who conferred with him six hours yesterday in Geneva, Switzerland.

House Group Indorses Plan To Revise ICC

Despite protests of railroad labor unions and management, the House Committee on Executive Expenditures yesterday indorsed President Truman's plan for reorganization of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

But the House and Senate still will have an opportunity to vote whether they want to veto the plan. Unless one or the other objects by May 23, it automatically goes into effect.

Under the plan, executive and administration functions of the commission would be transferred to the chairman.

Medical News Awards Given At Dinner

The first Albert and Mary Lasker Awards for newspaper and magazine writing in medical news were presented here last night.

Winners were William L. Laurence, veteran science reporter for the New York Times, and Herbert Yahrae and wife writing team, also of New York.

Laurence was chosen for a series of articles on the development of cortisone and ACTH.

The Yahraes were selected for their article, "Our Daughter Is an Epileptic," which appeared in Collier's magazine, on November 26, 1949.

The Lasker awards, consisting of $500 and a statuette of the Winged Victory of Samothrace, were presented at a dinner preceding the semi annual meeting of the National Association of Science Writers, at Hotel Statler.

Clay Picked to Head Radio Unit

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, a former American military governor in Germany, has been offered the presidency of the Radio Manufacturers Association at a reported salary of around $50,000 a year.

He would be the association's first full-time, paid president.

The association said yesterday negotiations with Clay are in progress, but declined to name the salary involved. Industry sources said, however, it would be close to $50,000.

Clay, who served on Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's staff during the war, retired from the Army last May. He is living in New York City.

The offer to Clay is in connection with a general reorganization of RMA voted by the board of directors at a session at St. Adele, Quebec, last Thursday. This calls for a full-time, paid president.

Bond Geddes, who has served as a paid executive vice president for 23 years, is planning to retire this year.

The presidency is now an honorary post. It is currently held by Raymond C. Cosgrove of Cincinnati, who has headed the association on four occasions. His term expires in June.

J. J. Kahn of Chicago heads the committee negotiating with Clay.

SLIGHTLY DEAFENED?
THOUSANDS NOW HELPED BY SMALL HEARING AID

People who hear ordinary conversation, but who have difficulty hearing radio and TV, or hearing in church, at meetings, in the movies and other public places do not want to be burdened with cumbersome hearing aids. Thousands of such people are now being helped by a tiny, compact aid designed by Bell Telephone Laboratories and manufactured by Western Electric.

This all-in-one instrument is the smallest ever made by Western Electric, yet amazingly efficient. It can be worn all the time or only when needed. Its small size makes it easy to slip into a handbag or pocket when not in use. It may also be equipped with the new invisible ear mold for additional concealment.

New Anti-Tubercular Drug Reported Here

Grime Pays

Giuseppe Dug Himself Heap o' Fuss

GIUSEPPE BORTOLETTO
Honesty rewarded

By Arthur Edson
Associated Press Reporter

Giuseppe Bortoletto never had it so good.

Here he was, a poor, 22-year-old coal shoveler from Padua, Italy.

Beside him was the Italian Ambassador, Alberto Tarchiani, saying nice things about Giuseppe and tossing off a glass of vermouth in his honor.

And here were reporters asking questions, and radio people shoving microphones into his beaming face.

"You would think I was the king," Giuseppe said.

Found a Wallet

While shoveling Marshall Plan coal, Bortoletto found an American wallet. It contained $35 in American money, quite a nest egg for an Italian laborer.

But honest Giuseppe turned in the money and went his way.

It turned out the wallet belonged to Vearl Phillips, who lives — approximately — in Dante, Va. Phillips lost the wallet a year ago, while working in the mines of the Clinchfield Coal Corp.

It turned out, too, that some Marshall Planners heard of Giuseppe's honesty and thought he should be rewarded.

One thing led to another, and before you could say, "Giuseppe Bortoletto," he was on his way to America, his passage paid out of counterpart funds. This is money put up by the Italians to match Marshall Plan funds.

And yesterday was the big day. The Ambassador had him to the embassy. He interviewed Giuseppe for the Voice of America.

The development of a new drug to fight tuberculosis was reported here yesterday at the opening medical session of the National Tuberculosis Association.

Other opening-day highlights of the organization's forty-sixth annual meeting, at Hotel Statler, included:

1. A warning against the use of TB-1, the antituberculosis synthetic drug developed in Germany and introduced into this country largely on glowing accounts of its effectiveness there.

2. A Public Health Service appraisal that the controversial tuberculosis vaccine, BCG, is still too unreliable for mass vaccination programs, despite its broad acceptance in a number of European countries.

Reported by N. Y. Doctor

The brand-new anti-tuberculosis drug, viomycin, was reported out by Dr. Ralph Tompsett, of the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, of New York.

Already, Dr. Tompsett reported, the drug has proved itself effective against the tuberculosis organisms in laboratory test-tubes and in animal experimentations. Its use in man, however, has only been begun, he declared.

Although it shows some toxic reactions in man, he reported, the "preliminary studies (with tubercular patients) indicate it can be used for prolonged periods."

Viomycin, derived from a soil mold, was discovered in the Brooklyn, N. Y., research laboratories of the Charles Pfizer Co. The same firm speeded development of penicillin, and recently produced the latest drug, terramycin, which has been reported effective against some 19 diseases.

TB-1 Use Assailed

Dr. Tompsett, in his joint report with his chief, Dr. Walsh McDermott of the New York Medical Center, pointed out that many drugs and chemical agents have been shown effective against tuberculosis but were later withdrawn because they did more harm than good to the patients.

That such might be the fate of the highly touted TB-1 was indicated yesterday in public warning issued by a committee of the American Trudeau Society, the medical section of NTA.

The body's medical research and therapy committee urged that use of the German-developed drug be undertaken "only by physicians experienced in the field of tuberculosis, and in patients in hospitals in which there are adequate laboratory facilities. . . ."

Pointing out that bad reactions have been reported in about one of every four patients treated with the drug, the committee said such toxic conditions "may occur at any time during the course of treatment and are often abrupt and without obvious warning."

Dr. Robert J. Anderson, chief of Public Health Service's Division of Tuberculosis, reported on appraisals of the tuberculosis vaccine, BCG, in which live organisms of bovine tuberculosis are injected into persons to immunize them against the human disease.

Among the vaccine's characteristics which call for caution is its instability.

Bronk Heads Science Academy

Dr. Detlev W. Bronk, president of Johns Hopkins University, was yesterday elected president of the National Academy of Sciences, in annual business meeting here.

Besides voting in a new president, Academy members elected a Foreign Secretary, Roger Adams, head of the department of chemistry at the University of Illinois, for a four-year term, beginning June 30; two new council members; 30 new members, and two foreign associates.

Elected to serve on the council were Oliver E. Buckley, president of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, and Walter S. Hunter, chairman of the department of physiology at Brown University, Providence.

Among the 30 new members voted in were two Johns Hopkins University professors, Drs. Ernst Cloos, structural geology, and Kenneth F. Maxcy, epidemeology. The two new foreign associates are Dr. Charles Herbert Best of the University of Toronto, a co-discoverer of insulin, and Dr. Albert Jan Kluyver, professor of microbiology, Technical University of Delft, Netherlands.

The Academy's Henry Draper gold medal for 1949 was presented at annual banquet meeting last night to Dr. Otto Struve, University of Chicago astronomer, for his notable contributions to astronomical physics during the past 25 years.

Today, academy members will meet in final scientific sessions at the Academy home, 2101 Constitution ave.

1000 Debate U. S. Burden on Schools them to Washington to attend the session.

Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of the Chairman of the Board of The Washington Post, presided as general chairman of the meeting. She opened the session on this note: "Schools are as good as people make them."

Glancing at the Congressmen present, Mrs. Meyer observed:

"This is truly an American assemblage when people and their representatives get together to study a question of Nation-wide importance."

Mrs. Meyer said the meeting was called because "we are trying to convince Congress that the Federal Government must help to solve certain problems created by the activities of the Federal Government.

"By improving schools for children of military and civilian personnel, not only do we do justice to the children of Federal workers, but bring content to the whole community."

Mrs. Meyer introduced William A. Early, superintendent of Arlington County schools, who described the general problem.

In substance, Early explained, the problem has been created by the acquisition of large property holdings throughout the Nation by the Federal Government. This property becomes tax-exempt. The Federal workers who swell the population of the community have children who must be schooled.

Early declared that more than 500 school districts in the Nation have been seriously affected by these Federal activities.

He said that Congressional subcommittees studying the two bills found enrolled in schools in these areas a million and a half children, "many whose education is being impaired because adequate provision was not made for their education when the Federal projects were undertaken."

The districts have had an increase of almost 800,000 children since the Federal impact occurred, Early said. They have 96,006 students on half-day sessions and 18,000 overcrowded and 5000 temporary classrooms.

Early said the "critical areas" need 11,500 additional classrooms "simply to bring their school plant facilities up to normal."

"There are 250,000,000 acres of Federally-owned property in these distrcits," Early said, "with an estimated present value of 13.5 billion dollars. If this property were assessed and taxable at existing rates it would yield an estimated $95,800,000 a year for school purposes."

He then introduced delegates from communities throughout the United States who explained what the problem is in their communities.

J. E. D. Wagner of Charlestown, Ind., said that the Federal Government acquired one-sixteenth of the land in the school district of Charlestown during World War II. Overnight, he said, the school population jumped from 400 to 1500 students, and it became necessary to send students to school in shifts.

Mrs. Hermes F. Gautier of Pascagoula, Miss., declared:

"It is a physical impossibility for the Pascagoula and Moss Point school districts to provide for the additional cost of educating children who are living in tax-exempt projects.

"Unless some form of permanent assistance is provided by the Federal Government in this and similar areas it will be impossible for our children to have a school program that will be satisfactory even on the lowest standards."

James K. Sims of Planeview, Kans., said:

"Planeview is 100 percent owned a d operated by the Federal Government. We have no taxable land. We have been operating on deficit financing since Planeview was organized in 1933.

"Our teacher contracts are not worth the paper they're written on. They are only good as long as we have the money and sometimes that is only 24 hours."

Mrs. Wells Harrington, mayor of Greenbelt, Md., spoke for the affected metropolitan Washington area, covering the Virginia cities of Alexandria and Falls Church, the Virginia counties of Arlington, Fairfax and Prince William, and the Maryland counties of Anne Arundel, Calvert, Charles, Harford, Montgomery, Prince Georges and St. Marys.

The school population in the immediate Washington area, Mrs. Harrington told her audience, has grown from 52,000 in 1940 to 92,000 in 1950. She estimated the Federal Government has holdings worth 688 million dollars, all tax-exempt, in this area.

"Because of this growth of population," said Mrs. Harrington, "children are attending classes in basements, cloak rooms, auditoriums and on double and triple shifts. We are convinced the Federal Government must no longer delay recognition of its responsibilities."

Reporting for Midwest City, Okla., Manly Moore said:

"We can provide a school program for only six months with the maximum tax effort on our part. School population grew from 108 in 1941 to 3000 in 1950."

Harvey Montague of Mad River Township, Ohio, declared, "The Federal Government has acquired one million dollars worth of untaxable property in our district. We are unable to cope with the situation."

Early announced that 300 telegrams from 86 other school districts throughout the Nation had been sent here urging support of the two bills introduced by Bailey.

B. Alden Lillywhite and Henry F. Alves, consultants for the congressional subcommittees that studied the problem, described provisions of the bills.

Byrd described education as the bedrock of the Nation's existence and asserted it was not possible to find an object of expenditure more justifiable. Money spent for rescuing local communities from crises in education, resulting from Federal activities, he declared, was not to be regarded as an expenditure but as an investment.

"It is an investment in the future of America," he insisted.

He attacked critics of Federal aid who oppose it on grounds of Federal control or on the basis of expense involved. Federal aid to the University of Maryland, amounting to millions of dollars, he told the group, had not brought with it any Federal control and he contended the bills to aid critical areas would not involve Federal control either.

No national problem, Byrd contended, as much concerned American parents as the welfare of their children. While indorsing measures for defense, Byrd said he believed that "in one way or another we have to build understanding among the people of the world and understanding among our own people, to teach our young men and women to understand the ways of other people and the governments of other people."

Byrd urged support of the two aid measures as a lasting contribution to the "fabric of American life."

He praised Mrs. Meyer for her leadership in the movement to obtain Federal aid for the school areas critically affected by Federal projects and for her help in solving other and similar national problems.

Realty Lobby Used Mails Free, Says CIO

A charge that two members of Congress have allowed their free-franking privileges to be used in the distribution of four million pieces of "propaganda" for the real estate lobby was made by a CIO official before the House Lobby Investigating Committee yesterday.

Leo Goodman, director of the CIO National Housing Committee, said the distribution was costing United States taxpayers "tremendous sums of money."

Goodman testified that four million copies of speeches against rent control, public housing, and Federal aid to education were reprinted from the Congressional Record and mailed under the free-franking privilege.

He did not put into the record the names of the congressmen involved. Goodman displayed copies of the CIO News of February 28 carrying the story of the dissemination of the speeches, but the CIO News was not put in the official record.

No Limit Ever Set

The actual reprinting of the franked stories, however, was not done at Government expense. The CIO News named the organizations which it charges paid for the distribution.

The committee did not appear disposed to dig into Goodman's charges. Representative Charles A. Halleck (R., Ind.) commented that in all fairness it should be noted that Congress had never set a limit on the use of the free-franking privilege.

Most of Goodman's testimony was taken up with a description of the operation of the CIO lobby in favor of such measures as public housing. In summing up goodman's testimony, Halleck said it was "quite obvious" that the techniques and methods used by the CIO were "pretty much the same" as the National Association of Real Estate Boards used on the other side of the fence.

Both Used Local 'Pressure'

The NAREB, said Halleck, uses its 1100 local associations "to put pressure on us" and in a like manner the CIO uses its 12,000 to 14,000 locals to do the same thing.

Goodman said he had participated in the drafting of legislation for members of Congress, had written many speeches for members of Congress and that the CIO legislative committee had entertained members of Congress at dinner.

He described the manner in which the housing committee made recommendations at CIO conventions and the way in which it asked local union heads to write or wire Congressmen.

Political Action Conceded

Halleck noted that Herbert U. Nelson, NAREB chief, had testified that his organization had not resorted to political action. He asked Goodman about the CIO's political action committee. Goodman acknowledged that CIO-PAC made every effort to bring voting records of members of Congress to the attention of its membership.

Goodman also called the attention of the committee to the fact that Nelson tried to work out a cooperation with the CIO on legislation for cooperative housing. Put into the record was a letter from Nelson to Walter Reuther, UAW-CIO chieftain, suggesting such cooperation.

Goodman testified there were several meetings with Nelson in his office but the CIO rejected the Nelson idea because they considered his proposal undemocratic. He said the cooperative housing bill sought by Nelson was one which in the judgment of the CIO would have permitted the real estate interests to dominate the cooperative housing plan.

'Good Earth'

Visitor Gives Symbolic Gift of Soil

The Washington Post
DR. JOSE PEDRO CIBILS
Presents urn of earth

Except for minor problems like crocodiles nipping at his tires and 9-foot boa constrictors blocking the road, the 14,000-mile auto jaunt from Montevideo was a breeze, said Dr. Jose Pedro Cibils.

The medican Marco Polo has arrived in Washington after completing a remarkable trip on a remarkable mission: Collecting samples of symbolic soil.

Being one of the few South American plastic surgeons and one of the most famous ones, he also was called on everywhere to stay over for operations ranging from correcting "exuberance of the nose" to congenital defects.

To symbolize Pan-American unity, Cibils, a Uruguayan, collected a handful of earth from each Latin-American nation he visited.

A golden-hued urn containing the good earth was presented yesterday in colorful ceremonies at the Pan American Union.

Cibils' saga was the climax of an idea born in Washington in 1947 in the Inter-American Federation of Automobile Associations.

Lusk Freed Of Fairfax Larceny Count

Richard S. Lusk, Fairfax County developer, was acquitted in Fairfax Circuit Court yesterday of one of three grand larceny charges on which he was indicted last November.

Without waiting to hear defense testimony, Judge Paul E. Brown granted a defense motion to dismiss the case on the grounds there was insufficient evidence to show Lusk had misappropriated a $1660 deposit on a home in Woodlawn Manor subdivision. The development was built by Veterans' Housing Corp., headed by the defendant.

Defense Attorney Thomas W. Phillips moved for acquittal after Mr. and Mrs. Channing L. Pace, 3100 S. Hill st., Arlington, testified they gave Lusk the deposit when they sought to move to a larger home in the subdivision. They testified the home was never completed and their money was never returned.

In his motion for dismissal, Phillips contended the State failed to disprove Lusk's claim that he indorsed the deposit check over to the representative of a real estate concern which actually was handling sale of the new house.

Protests, 'Perhaps Violence,' Seen if Rent Control Lapses

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Governor Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois yesterday quoted a Chicago municipal judge as stating that the end of rent control will bring "mass protests, and perhaps some violence."

Stevenson's statement was made before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee in an urgent plea for continuation of rent controls.

If Congress fails to act, Stevenson said, he will be forced to call the Illinois legislature into special session to pass a State control law.

Under questioning of Chairman Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.), Stevenson said he could get along with a proposed compromise.

This would retain existing controls until the end of this year, with a provision for an additional cities request it.

Regardless of whether controls are extended, Maybank told reporters, Congress should provide funds to carry on the present program to June 30.

Maybank was commenting on the testimony of Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods that his agency will be "broke" by May 26 unless it gets another appropriation. Woods, whose office administers the controls, appeared before the committee Monday to urge a year's extension of the regulations.

Aaron W. White, assistant city solicitor for Philadelphia, testified the housing shortage still is critical for middle and low income groups who rent homes.

U. S. Is Sued For $15,000 In Air Crash

The United States was sued for $15,000 and costs yesterday for "negligence, default and general carelessness" in the Eastern airliner P-38 crash over National Airport November 1, in which 55 persons were killed.

The suit was filed in District Court by the brother of Mrs. Martha Thompson McCusty who was killed with her husband and 18-month-old daughter in the disaster.

The brother is Phillip F. Thompson, 4385 F st. se., who said he was administrator of Mrs. McCusty's estate.

The suit charged that the collision of the Eastern airliner and the plane piloted by Bolivian Erick Rios Bridoux was the "direct result" of negligence on the part of the Government, as owner and operator of the airport.

Rios was the sole survivor. Both he and Eastern Airlines have been sued by administrators of the estates of other persons killed in the crash.

Black Foresees $25 Million Loan To Tito by Fall

Paris, April 24 (U.P.).—Eugene R. Black, president of the World Bank, said today the bank may conclude negotiations for a 25 million dollar loan to Yugoslavia by this fall.

He told a press conference that Yugoslavia might take a part of the loan in French francs, which were made available to the bank for loan purposes last week.

RFC Seeking Order to Sell Lustron Assets

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation announced yesterday that an order for sale of the assets of the Lustron Prefabricated Housing Corp. will be filed "shortly in Federal District Court at Columbus.

RFC General Counsel James L. Dougherty said the action was decided reluctantly because "certain negotiations" for refinancing the firm have fallen through.

"The only recourse now is an order of sale," he said.

The Columbus court and the RFC have been trying unsuccessfully to work out a new financing scheme for Lustron since the Federal agency foreclosed its $37,500,000 loan to the firm several weeks ago.

Dougherty said the court will decide whether the sale will be by auction or sealed bids.

"It will not be a negotiated sale," he added.

Ship Construction Subsidies Defended

NYHT News Service

Steamship operators vigorously defended ship subsidy practices yesterday before a Senate Merchant Marine Subcommittee and asked for no major changes in that phase of the Nation's shipping legislation.

John E. Slater, president of American Export Lines, produced figures to show that the 45 percent construction subsidy awarded to his company by the Maritime Commission for construction of two express liners was more than justified. He asserted that to establish actual parity of costs for similar liners in a Dutch or other foreign yard, the subsidy would have been nearer 55 percent.

Slater and other top executives of subsidized lines were testifying before the subcommittee headed by Senator Warren G. Magnuson (D., Wash.) in rebuttal to charges made recently by the General Accounting Office that methods of arriving at shipping subsidies are "irregular." The charges were widely publicized in hearings before the House Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Department to which the shipping companies were not invited to present their side of the case.

Theodore Brent, president of the Mississippi Shipping Co. supported Slater's contentions and added that the charges by the House committee, which is headed by Representative Porter Hardy, jr., (D., Va.), have held up construction of a new liner his company was prepared to build with a construction subsidy. The liner would be the first motor passenger ship constructed in this country.

Slater vigorously defended the Merchant Marine Act of 1936 and supported the proposed long-range program as sufficient amendment to it. He opposed general shipping subsidies without regulatory restrictions on their recipients and asserted that double-track subsidies should be granted only after the original operator had first opportunity to satisfy increased demands for service in a route.

Phone Strike Called Off

as yet been reached but that bargaining would resume today.

A Federal mediator was quoted as being optimistic that the tension in the phone controversy had been eased, and the proper atmosphere for a settlement had been created by the strike postponement.

There was much confusion and some fear for several hours after CWA's announcement of the strike deferral that the Bell System's 25 subsidiaries would be hit by a work stoppage anyway. This anxiety stemmed from the possibility that the Western Electric installation workers would not only continue their grievance strike, but throw up picket lines as well.

Around 7 p. m., however, Ernest Weaver, who heads the installation workers division of the union, declared in New York City that his 10,000 members would obey the no-picket order from headquarters. He also said that his division and the company would continue negotiations all through the night in an effort to resolve the dispute.

'Saucers' Termed Spent Cartridges Of Guided Missiles

Miami Beach, Fla., April 25 (AP).—Kenneth De Courcy, editor of the London Intelligence Digest, said today he believed so-called "flying saucers" actually were the spent cartridges of guided missiles.

He told the Miami Beach Rotary Club the United States was working at top speed on guided missiles. He cited reports of "flying saucers" as evidence of this activity.

De Courcy said Russia was well along in both the guided missile and submarine branches of modern warfare and had already outstripped the United States in the development of submarine power.

He said he believed the Russians would use submarines to carry atom bombs in event of war and probably would explode them under water.

vote with us on the day-to-day cuts. But we think a lot of them will vote for our final motion."

Martin's GOP policy committee met briefly yesterday but a decision on the form of the GOP recommit motion was put off until next week.

The House Ways and Means Committee, which has been cutting excise taxes faster than the House could trim spending, meanwhile considered several plans for reducing the wartime admissions tax. A decision on the admissions levy was postponed until today. The committee last week cut some wartime excises 335 million dollars, and reductions in others may treble that revenue loss.

Yesterday's 75-million-dollar increase in public hospital construction grants followed House approval Monday of the Administration-opposed Rankin bill directing the Veterans' Administration to go ahead with 237 million dollars in veterans hospital construction previously canceled by the President.

But yesterday's increase had an Administration green light. Representative Albert Gore (D., Tenn.) sparred with Representative Frank B. Keefe (R., W. Va.) for the right to offer the amendment increasing the outlay and Gore won out.

Keefe promptly offered a substitute providing not only the 75-million-dollar boost in contract authority but an extra 25 million in cash to pay off contractual obligations already incurred in the hospital program.

Representative John Taber (R., N.Y.), leading GOP economy forces, took the floor against both amendments. Keefe's substitute was shouted down, but Gore's amendment, almost solidly backed by the Democrats, won by a 2-to-1 count.

Keefe, who complained Gore's amendment "doesn't go far enough," then proposed an increase of $1,450,000 in Public Health Service administrative funds which he said was made necessary by the construction boost. The House barely defeated this, 68 to 67.

A motion by Representative Errett P. Scrivner (R., Kans.) to cut $436,000 from the Labor Department solicitor's office was narrowly defeated, 134 to 130.

Another by Keefe to cut back Wage and Hours Division funds $1,396,400 was rejected, 121 to 102.

also so happens she is a very sincere person.

"Your father, he's pretty good himself," said a reporter, referring to the Veep, who wooed and wed her mother last year.

She Knows

Promptly and proudly replied Miss Hadley: "That's what I understand."

Anne was here before going down to Winchester, Va., today to reign as queen Thursday and Friday over the twenty-third Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival.

Although she did not see him in action on the Senate floor, she will see the Veep in another type of action Thursday for which he is almost equally famous.

Who will crown her?

Why, that champion crowner of queens, the Veep himself.

Queen Anne is as happy a choice for royal honors as has been made lately in these parts.

She has looks, in particular the striking patrician features of her mother. And she has what is pure gravy in a lovely woman, especially queens, which is brains.

She is majoring in philosophy, at Newcomb College in New Orleans, because: "You learn how to think. I love to argue. I love to have friendly arguments, that is."

From this love of arguing it is not to be assumed that she is interested in politics: "I don't know anything about politics."

The dark-eyed Miss Hadley devoted most of yesterday to pursuits very proper to a modern-day queen.

Highlights Thursday include the pageant and coronation of the queen at 3 p. m.; Friday, a repeat performance of the pageant at 10 a. m. and the grand festival parade at 2 p. m.

U. S. and Canada Require Seaway, Acheson Testifies

Secretary of State Acheson said yesterday building of the "long overdue" St. Lawrence seaway and power project is as essential to the economy and defense of Canada as it is to the United States.

He told the House Public Works Committee, considering legislation to authorize the 800-million-dollar-plus development, that this Nation's action on the proposal cannot fail to have an immediate effect on the relations between the two countries.

"If we adopt the legislation, Canada and the United States can go forward in this joint venture for their mutual benefit and our already happy relations will be made happier," he said.

'If we refuse to cooperate, there will be disappointment and justifiable criticism on both sides of the border."

Surgery May Curb Blood Clot Deaths

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Washington surgeons are investigating the possibility that fatal blood clots which sometimes follow operations may be reduced by cutting off nerves to the lungs.

The surgical research, still in animal experimentation stage, is under way at the laboratories of George Washington University Medical School here.

Dr. Edward Beattie, GWU associate in surgery, disclosed the research project recently at a meeting of the GWU Medical Society, at 1335 H st. nw.

Though still too early to give definite conclusions, he told the assembled physicians results so far seem to show a "distinct difference" in the artificial production of lung emboli (blood clots) between treated and untreated dogs.

Those animals whose lung nerves have been severed withstand far greater infusions of "simulated blood clots" than the surgically untreated dogs, he reported.

The "simulated clots," he explained, are introduced into the animal's bloodstream in a solution of microscopically small plant spores, or seeds. The seeds mesh together in the narrow blood-ways of the lungs to form the fatal blood-blocks similar to those which sometimes follow operations.

Dr. Beattie said the research project is being carried on by himself, Dr. Brian Blades, GWU professor of surgery, and Dr. William Elias, research fellow in surgery. It is only one phase of a number of investigations under way to explain mechanisms uncovered in chest surgery for asthma, he said.

The blood-clot study was started, it was explained, after some investigators noted that a nerve reflex in the lungs might be a prime factor in the deaths which strike without warning during convalescence following operations.

It was further noted, Dr. Beattie said, that no patients who underwent the nerve-severing surgery for asthma developed plumonary embolisms, in contrast to a "relatively high incidence" of such clots following other, such as abdominal, operations.

No Cause for Alarm

Massillon, Ohio, April 25 (AP).—City Auditor Edgar L. Lash withheld payment for three $5 alarm clocks for the Massillon Fire Department. He gave this reason: "There should be a fireman on duty 24 hours a day. I see no reason for an alarm clock to wake up anyone."

Prince Georges to Cut Library Service for Lack of Funds

By Phillip J. Austinsen
Post Reporter

Sharp curtailment of Prince Georges County public library facilities is planned because of the failure of the County Commissioners to provide needed funds.

Library officials say it will be necessary to dismiss two full-time employes and sharply decrease the bookmobile service to rural areas.

The Board of Trustees of the Prince Georges County Memorial Library had requested the County Commissioners to increase the levy for the library facilities from the present two cents per $100 assessed value to 2½ cents.

The League of Women Voters, the Civic Federation, the American Association of University Women and a large number of loyal citizens and women's club groups had urged the higher levy to provide more books.

Tax Rate Reduced

It was pointed out that an increase of one-half cent in the tax rate would mean 20 cents additional a year on a house assessed at $4000. The house of the same assessment now pays 80 cents a year for the two-cent rate, library officials say, and the increase would mean that a $4000 house would pay $1 a year for library service.

The County Commissioners announced Friday they had reduced the county tax rate 7 cents below last year's rate of $1.97 per $100 assessed value.

The library system received $38,000 from the county in the current budget, plus $5300 from State funds which must be allocated to purchase of books.

Increase in the county assessable base this year will provide approximately $4200 additional county funds or a total of approximately $42,200, most of which must be expended for equipment, salaries and paying off debts.

The money received from the State will buy about 2500 books.

The additional $10,500 which would come from the 1-2-cent increase would make possible purchase of an additional 5000 books, making 7500 new books posible for the system. The library should add 36,000 new books under national average figures.

The board also is considering further cuts in service to provide funds for more books. The proposed cut, effective June 15, will make possible purchase of about 1500 books, according to Mrs. Mary B. Kenan, county librarian.

The library system has 22,000 volumes and borrows about 2000 annually from the library extension division of the State Department of Education. These were circulated 132,000 times in the fiscal year from July 1, 1948, to July 1, 1949.

The library's four branches at Hyattsville, Laurel, Fairmount Heights and District Heights would not be curtailed at present, Mrs. Kenan said. The reductions in service will be effected on the bookmobile routes, where 109 stops, including 30 schools, are made weekly. This service may be curtailed one third to one half, she said.

Bing Tells of Out-Talking 3 Cops

Paris, April 25 (AP).—Bing Crosby disclosed he narrowly escaped being thrown into a Paris jail.

Vacationing here before going to England to play in the British Amateur Golf Tournament, Bing told reporters:

"Saturday I'm walking up the Champs-Elysees and I decide to get a little sun. All those benches around the whatchamacallit — oh, yeah, the Rond Point — were filled, so I lay down on the grass, with a newspaper under my head.

"All of a sudden I'm whacked on the soles of my feet and I look up and there's three gendarmes, looking as mean as a New York cop. I tried to explain to them I was an American. I told them I was Bing Crosby. That laid an egg.

"I even showed them the lining on my jacket, where it said Bing Crosby. Still no soap. The three of them then start dragging me off. Finally I pulled out this medal given me by the Professional Golfers Association.

"So in my pidgin French I tell them — police guard American. They believed I was a cop, but they've still got a question. They asked and I couldn't answer: 'How can a cop afford a vacation in France?'"

The Gallup Poll

Joblessness Found Big Worry Of U. S. Public, Survey Finds

By George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., April 25.—When President Truman takes his swing around the country next month he is likely to find that unemployment is one of the major local issues in the sections he visits.

That is what interviewers for the Institute have found in questioning voters in each section on the question:

"What do you think is the MOST IMPORTANT problem facing this section of the country today?"

Unemployment was mentioned more often than anything else in the various sections, particularly in the Far West and in the New England and Middle Atlantic areas.

In the East, housing shortages rank next to unemployment in the survey, while along the West Coast low water supply and conservation are prominently mentioned.

Here are the top three problems in each section, as seen by the persons living in those sections who were interviewed in the survey:

NEW ENGLAND AND MIDATLANTIC
(Me., N. H., Vt., Mass., R. I., Conn., N. Y., N. J., Del., Penna., Md., W. Va.)
1. Unemployment.
2. Housing.
3. Economic problems, chiefly high living costs.

MIDDLE WEST
(Ohio, Ind., Ill., Mich., Wis., Iowa, Nebr., Kans., Minn., N. Dak., S. Dak., Mo.)
1. Unemployment.
2. Strikes and labor troubles.
3. Farm problems.

SOUTH
(Va., Ga., N. C., S. C., Fla., Miss., Ala., La., Tenn., Ark., Ky., Tex., Okla.)
1 Unemployment.
2. Civil rights, race problems.
3. Farm problems.

FAR WEST
(Mont., Idaho, Colo., Utah, N. Mex., Nev., Ariz., Wyo., Calif., Oreg., Wash.)
1. Unemployment
2. Water shortages.
3. Conservation.

Along the West Coast the survey found considerable public concern over defense and preparedness against possible attack. In fact this subject ranked fourth in frequency of mention. In other sections it turned up only infrequently.

In the South a good deal of concern was expressed over high living costs and education problems. Housing problems ranked very low there.

Although most economists see a good general business picture ahead, the persistence of unemployment has begun to worry union leaders, particularly in the CIO, according to reports. Washington, too, is showing increasing interest in the problem. The Joint Economic Committee, the Federal Reserve Board and several of the Cabinet departments are reported to be at work devising possible remedies if the situation continues unchanged.

Unemployment is expected to reach some five million by midsummer. However, with the postwar business boom still running in many manufacturing lines, some economists say that we can have several million unemployed without a business slump.

Board of Trade Writes Off D. C. Home Rule for This Year

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

The Washington Board of Trade has virtually written off District home rule legislation as a dead duck this year.

This was disclosed officially yesterday by Thornton W. Owen, native Washingtonian, shortly after his election as president of the trade group, succeeding Frederick P. H. Siddons.

Owen, owner of a Washington real estate appraisers business, said it is "fairly certain" now that the Senate-passed Kefauver home rule bill "will fail of enactment" in the House.

"However, we must continue studies of similar legislation," he told the group's board of directors, "and intensify our campaign for national representation for the District of Columbia in Congress."

Owen's comment on local self-government was listed in a nine-point program of proposed board activities for the coming year, which, he said "stand out for principal emphasis."

Other community projects outlined by Owen for special board attention included:

1. Development of Washington as an international world trade center. This work has gone ahead rapidly, said Owen, "and shortly we will announce formation of a charter membership for the proposed International Trade Mart."

2. Continued "full support wherever possible" to the Sesquicentennial celebration.

3. Raising $110,000 for the Greater National Capital Committee in a fund campaign to start May 1. This committee is devoted to attracting more visitors and conventions to Washington.

4. Further studies of the parking and transportation problems here and the "still-serious threat of decentralization of the downtown business area."

5. A continuing study of municipal research and taxation by a recently reorganized board committee.

Draws Sharp Rebuke

Owen's prediction of failure in the current campaign to obtain sufficient House petition signatures to bring the home rule measure to a floor vote brought a sharp rebuke from the chief local suffrage spokeman last night.

Said Culver B. Chamberlain, chairman of the Central Suffrage Conference:

"The leadership of the Board of Trade notwithstanding, home rule will become a reality in the District—and in the not too distant future.

"If the present board leadership is gratified in negative efforts designed to prevent real progress in the District, then they may derive such satisfaction as they can from aiding in the defeat of the Kefauver measure, if, in fact, they succeed in so doing."

The trade group's board of directors at a meeting in American Security & Trust Co. Building yesterday also elected the following other officers to serve with Owen:

Thomas J. Groom, president, Bank of Commerce & Savings, first vice president; E. D. Merrill, president, Capital Transit Co., second vice president; Harry L. Merrick, vice president, Kal, Ehrlich & Merrick, advertising firm, secretary; James A. Cassidy, proprietor, James A. Cassidy Building Products, reelected treasurer; Clarence W. Gosnell, president, Clarence W. Gosnell, Inc., building contractors, assistant treasurer, and Edward F. Colladay, senior member of Colladay & Colladay, law firm, reelected general counsel.

3d-Generation Businessman

The 46-year-old new president is an alert third-generation Washington businessman. He is proprietor of Thos. J. Owen & Sons, a real estate and auctioneers business, named after his grandfather who hung out his shingle here in 1896.

He is vice president and director of the Perpetual Building Association, a director of the American and Security & Trust Co., the National Mortgage and Investment Co. and the Washington Title Insurance Co.

Married and father of two sons, Owen is chairman of the board of trustees of Landon School for Boys, trustee of the Washington City Orphan Asylum, director of the Police Boys Club and trustee of the United Chest Federation of the National Capital Area.

He is a member of the Kiwanis Club Mountain Pleasant Lodge Lodge, F.A.A.M. No. 33, Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity and Columbia Country Club.

He lives at 4640 Hawthorne la. nw.

Liked the Work

Storm Took Police Test Just for Fun

For a fellow who took his entrance exam just for the heck of it, Inspector Walter A. Storm has gone about as far as you can go in the law-enforcement trade.

Of course, there's one more level in the Metropolitan Police Department hierarchy, but you couldn't say that Storm, named yesterday as second-in-command of the force, was anything but satisfied with his new post.

"I'm very grateful to the Board of Commissioners and to Maj. (Robert J.) Barrett for placing such confidence in me," he modestly commented about his promotion.

Had Trial Run

The jut-jawed, soft-spoken assistant superintendent who will become executive officer on May 1, discovered after a six-months "trial run" as a rookie in 1934 that the MPD consisted of "a pretty good bunch of men."

He then decided to stick around awhile, having taken the examination "to keep a friend company." The friend flunked, and as any good success story would have it, Storm made the highest mark.

Not only that, he has headed the list on every policeman's examination since 1924.

Then 23 years old, Storm had just come to Washington from guard duty as a Marine aboard the Olympia, which brought the Unknown Soldier to the United States with a hand-picked guard of honor.

Inveterate Reader

"I probably had as little knowledge of police work as anyone in the department," he recalls in reflecting on the old days.

But Inspector Storm was and is an "inveterate reader." He perused every manual and volume furnished by the department, but carefully. In a year and a half, he had learned what he calls "a good deal" about the business of equal justice under law.

He had been in charge of police schools for two years before being promoted to assistant superintendent this month. He was made a sergeant in the traffic division in 1931 and promoted to lieutenant five years later.

Storm is married and the father of a 12-year-old son, with whom he lives at 2511 14th st. ne.

He recalls many a celebrated case in which he figured prominently, such as the "whooppee girl" slaying and the Milsie Henry gang killing, not to mentioned the Greyhound Bus holdup on New Year's Eve, 1946.

But he spends his less suspense-filled moments reading, as one might suspect . . . detective stories about Perry Mason.

Pvt. Otto M. W. Neilson, jr., Twelfth Precinct, to corporal, $4025.

Probationary Detective Joseph A. Gabry's narcotics squad, to precinct detective.

Probationary Detective Frank J. Innocenti, Juvenile squad, to precinct detective.

Pvt. Remy G. Ducote, jr., to probationary detective.

Pvt. Harold F. Gipe to probationary detective in place of Innocenti.

Pvt. George R. MacKinnon, relieved as technician, Metropolitan Police Department, and assigned to duty in the executive office.

Pvt. Gilbert C. Heine assigned to replace MacKinnon as technician

Pvt. Harold A. Shinn, assigned as technician to replace Pvt. Stephen F. Goggins, retiring.

Inspector Storm was promoted from the rank of captain on February 27, 1948, and took command of the Metropolitan Police training school on March 1 of the same year.

He had been commanding officer of the Tenth Precinct. Now 49, he has been on the force for 25 years. He was first assigned to the Tenth Precinct in 1925, and later served in the Sixth Precinct and the Traffic Bureau. In July, 1937, he was promoted to lieutenant, and in May, 1940, became a captain.

Inspector Jefferies, 53, who joined the force in 1922, was assigned to the old Sixth Precinct (now No. 1) and became a sergeant six years later.

He was cited in 1942 for flinging himself at a fellow officer who had just killed a station sergeant. He figured in the congressional crime inquiry last March, when Capt. Anthony Richitt testified he whitewashed a gambling complaint at Jefferies' direction.

Jefferies denied he ever requested Richitt to change and report, and Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett defended him with the statement, "I'll back Inspector Jefferies for what he's done—he hasn't done a thing wrong."

Captain Winfree was in command of the Seventh Precinct for about seven years before he took charge of No. 6 in 1947.

Lieutenant Rasmussen, 43, joined the force in 1931 and has been at the First Precinct for two years. Formerly assigned to Second Precinct, he was promoted from sergeant to lieutenant less than three years ago.

Sergeant Mowry, 36, a member of the force for 15 years, was once rewarded for capturing a deserter from the Marine Corps.

Gabrys was one of two detectives who trapped and killed Henry R. (Big Boy) Milton, a member of the notorious "Tri-State Gang," in a District drug store in 1948.

Ducote earned the reputation of ace investigator of hit-and-run cases while a member of the Accident Investigation Unit before he was transferred to the homicide squad in January.

75 Take Part In Baltimore Relief March

Baltimore, April 25 (AP).—About 75 persons marched on the City Hall today to ask for an expanded relief program or more jobs.

Leading the parade on behalf of the Baltimore Council for Jobs and Relief was the Rev. Alfred Holt, pastor of the White Temple of Occult Science.

A statement left by the marchers for Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro accused the city administration of "failing to prevent starvation, freezing and evictions" and demanded the creation of 25,000 jobs, either in industry or public works projects.

The marchers paraded around the city chanting "we want jobs" then pulled up at the hall. An advance announcement had said 100,000 would march.

Few Firemen Admitted To Put Out C.I.D. Fire

Although 18 pieces of equipment responded, just enough firemen were let into the super secret Central Intelligence Building yesterday to douse a small fire in a partition. The fire was caused by sparks from a welder's torch. No secret papers were damaged, it was said.

McFarland said both men were called to testify "solely for the purpose of obtaining evidence on how bookmakers operate." He said there would be no personal investigation of Adonis and Erickson.

Meanwhile, at the other end of the Capitol the House Interstate Commerce Committee announced hearings on Thursday and Friday on the Senate-approved bill to ban interstate shipment of slot machines. Exceptions would be made for shipment into States where a Governor certifies they are legal.

The action came after Attorney General J. Howard McGrath had written Chairman Crosser (D., Ohio) asking for "prompt consideration." Representative Preston (D., Ga.) and officials of several Government agencies will testify. Preston introduced a bill in January Similar to that passed by the Senate.

Virginia Prepares For 'Slot' Season

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

George Washington, a strong man with a silver dollar, should be at the old birthplace this summer with a stack of coins.

He could play the slot machines at Muse's Beach, a few hundred yards from the front door of Wakefield on the Potomac River.

The odds may not be the best, but what did he get for throwing a silver dollar across the Rappahannock?

Muse's Beach is one of several spots dotting the Potomac shore of Virginia where slot machines, illegal in the Old Dominion, operate every summer.

Controversy Flares

The center of operations is Colonial Beach, now the scene of a lively controversy.

Operators of the "slots"—nickel, dime, quarter, half-dollar machines—are protected by a legal technicality that says Maryland has jurisdiction over the Potomac River up to the low-water mark on the Virginia side.

And slot machines are legal in Charles County, Md., directly across the Potomac.

Thus property owners in the resort area build their piers beyond the low water mark, set up a small house on the end and lease it to a resident of Charles County, who promptly installs the "slots."

Machines "Help a Lot"

C. E. Muse, a 61-year-old farmer whose ancestors used to plant corn with the Washingtons at Wakefield, would be the last to deny the presence of slots at his place.

"They help out a lot," he says, "and I'll have some more this year, just like always."

Delbert W. Conner, who, with his brother, owns the Ambassador Hotel in Colonial Beach, is putting the finishing touches on a 20x30 foot house on the end of his pier.

It's a fair-sized investment, Conner says, because he expects to have booths and a bar, and hot and cold running water. There will be about 25 slot machines, plus liquor, wine and beer, if his lessee gets a Maryland license.

Prepare for Season

Next to Conner's is a pier owned by Walter Hendrick, where painters were rushing work on a new structure to be ready soon.

Farther north is the New Atlanta Hotel pier, where slot machines have been operating for several years.

The town of Colonial Beach almost got in the business, indirectly, through the efforts of Councilman John E. Mayo.

A local attorney, Mayo believes the city could lease its municipal pier and make almost $10,000 a year.

Churchgoers Protest

But about 350 citizens, most of them members of the First Baptist Church, protested Mayo's resolution vigorously, and the council rejected three bids between $1600 and $8000 for the lease.

The Rev. J. L. Carrick, pastor of the church and leader of the anti-gambling crusade, believes there's still more to be done.

"We're trying to find a way to prohibit private interests from cluttering up the waterfront with gambling and drinking establishments," he said.

Coincidentally, many persons who have a financial interest in slot machines would like to see the law officially interpreted.

Suggests Shore Deed

The Rev. Mr. Carrick wonders if there isn't some way the State of Maryland could deed a portion of the Virginia shoreline to the Old Dominion, making it impractical for operators to build jetties into Maryland water.

But Mayo believes the question should be put to the test of a full-fledged court proceeding.

The Westmoreland County Circuit Court held years ago that Virginia had jurisdiction over the end of the piers. But there never was a test made of the case on appeal.

On the other hand, the Virginia attorney general has offered an opinion that Maryland has jurisdiction.

Meanwhile, Decoration Day is D-day for the resort trade in the Colonial Beach area, for that's when outsiders begin arriving to spend their vacation and money.

And you can bet your bottom jitney there will be slot machines, and probably mixed drinks "over" the waters of Charles County—in spots, about 30 feet from the Virginia shore.

New Baltimore Airport to Open Early in July

Baltimore's fifteen-million-dollar Friendship - International Airport, called the "first postwar superairdrome," will open for commercial operations the first week in July.

There are conflicting opinions on whether the huge field, eight miles south of Baltimore, will be of any real value to Washington's congested National Airport.

Promoters of the Baltimore project say that when a new limited-access expressway now under construction is completed, the airport will be 15 minutes from downtown Baltimore, 35 minutes from Washington and 25 from Annapolis.

May Relieve D. C. Load

A Civil Aeronautics Administration spokesman said it is "conceivable" that Friendship-International could relieve the heavy load here in the distant future, but that another airport in Greater Washington is the "only real solution."

The Senate has passed a bill authorizing construction of a new airport here to handle the overflow at Washington National.

The CAA says that the local facility is fast reaching the "saturation point" and cannot possibly accommodate an estimated 40-percent increase in traffic foreseen for 1955.

As for the trip from Friendship-International to a downtown Washington hotel by automobile, the official said road checks show it now takes about 55 minutes.

The main runway of the new airport is just short of two miles long and is built to receive any aircraft now flying or likely to be built in the near future.

Herbert W. Reichelt, 41-year-old Mount Rainier lawyer elected as his town's mayor last May on a platform of ridding Mount Rainier of "undesirable elements," is sure organized gambling is at an end there.

Reichelt

Reichelt says he does not think Mount Rainier is free of all gambling, however.

"There are still numbers runners; there are still bookies' contacts," he says adding that the town's police can make little headway against these.

"They won't take numbers or horse bets from strangers and they don't use numbers slips. We simply can't get the evidence to convict them," Reichelt said in a discussion of the problem.

Soon after he took office last May, Reichelt had served notice that "known gambling will no longer be tolerated" and that anyone convicted of gambling would be punished to the full extent of the law.

Ousts Police Chief

During Reichelt's campaign for election over incumbent Mayor Floyd B. Mathias, Police Chief Gene Plumer became a political issue, and when Mathias was defeated, Reichelt ousted Plumer and appointed John W. Wise to his post.

Mount Rainier's mayor thinks the town is now out of the cleanup phase and in the improvement phase. The mayor and councilmen are now embarked on a program of street maintenance and improvement; of bridge construction; and of modernized street lighting.

To aid in street maintenance, the town has installed parking meters on its main arteries, from which, Reichelt said, an estimated $4000 to $4500 in annual revenue will be accrued. First meter receipts, he said, probably will be used to purchase a three-ton roller to press macadam used in repair work.

Mount Rainier has gone to the Prince Georges County commissioners with a project "too big for us to handle" which Reichelt believes would be a boon to Mount Rainier businessmen. It is construction of a bridge across the creek at the foot of 34th st., joining Queenstown with Mount Rainier. Reichelt pointed out that the project would open up a new artery of traffic, and in addition would make the Mount Rainier-Brentwood elementary school, which is to be opened next September, accessible to the Queenstown-Chillum area. Project is estimated to cost $188,000, Reichelt said. He hopes that the county will approve the work for the coming year.

Another project Mount Rainier is undertaking in its general improvement program is modernization of its street lighting system by replacing all 100-watt bulbs with 250-candlepower globe lights. The modernization, Reichelt estimates, will take three or four years to complete.

Reichelt, who lives at 4303 31st st. in Mount Rainier, won his present post in his first try for public office. A graduate of Columbus University, where he got his law degree in 1932, Reichelt is married and has two sons, Herbert, jr., 12, and Charles Joseph, 10. He said he has no time for golf or other hobbies, but has found time to serve as vice president of the Prince Georges County Community Chest Planning Council and as a member of the Mount Rainier-Brentwood Lions Club.

By Georganne Williamson

A LITTLE over 10 years ago a Negro musician took up his place at the piano of the Old New Orleans supper club and restaurant. Now, at 35, Les Williams has proven himself one of the most indefatigable and resourceful musicians in town.

Officially, Williams is director of the National Academy of Music and Art. He is also on the board of the National Association of Negro Musicians, Inc., and is president of the D. C. branch.

Unofficially, Les can be found in the course of the week doing a stint as disc jockey on station WOOK, directing his two choirs (one professional, the other church choir), presiding over his school's tri-weekly program of classical performances on WQQW, singing Lieder himself, improvising concerto forms from the three notes the audience offers him, or rolling his eyes and pleading in fine voice, "Tell me, honey, won't you tell me please—is it love or heart disease?"

His style is inimitable—he makes it up as he goes along, much of it never to be heard the same way again. And his mind toys with a subject (often peculiarly appropriate to a restaurant) he may start tentatively with the words, "I love lamb chops. Fry them, broil them, stew them—still they're lamb chops. I LOVE lamb chops." A few chords and his mental associations produce this: "I looked at the menu to see what 15 cents would do: No meat to eat, nothin' at all." Reconsidering this harsh fate, he amends: "One meat ball, one meat ball . . . is better than none at all."

Guests at the Old New Orleans take huge delight in all this. A coterie of chuckling listeners suggesting subjects for his treatment is often found around the piano in the main dining room. If they want Bach's piano musc or operatic melodies, Les can oblige. He loves and plays all kinds of music.

The jovial, easy-going singer, originally from Brooklyn, has been in Washington about 18 years. He took his bachelor of arts degree at Howard University, where he studied organ, piano and voice. He also has a master of arts degree and an honorary doctorate of music. Frank Laforge and Arnold Lovejoy are among his teachers.

Les is particularly interested in the "Porgy and Bess" type of opera, has written several himself and performed them at his school. The school, incidentally, the National Academy of Music and Art, has 12 college-trained teachers, 114 students. Approved for GI work, it is inter-racial, as is his professional choir. His choir was the nucleus of the 300-voice group which he led at Chatauqua in '48. He took his 12 leading singers up with him for the solos.

Les is scheduled for a pleasant change from the Washington summer in either June or July. He will take off for England, stay just long enough to sing the Beethoven Ninth with a philharmonic and chorus in London, and then return to his rigorous Washington routine.

Flat Fee Plan For Auto Tags Is Disapproved

The District Commissioners yesterday turned down a proposal to substitute flat fees for the motor vehicle personal property tax.

The action was on advice of District Assessor Edward A. Dent.

The change had been suggested by George E. Kenelpp, director of Vehicles and Traffic, as a means of simplifying his department's annual job of registering vehicles.

Under the present system a car owner pays two fees to obtain new tags. One is based on weight. The other is the personal property tax, which is computed according to the year, model and make of the car. Keneipp said he could do his job quicker and more accurately if the 350 categories of vehicles created by the personal property tax could be reduced to a few based solely on weight.

Kenelpp did not present a proposed rate schedule. One reason Dent opposed the plan, according to Commissioner John Russell Young's administrative assistant Charles Stofberg, was that there was no assurance the District would not lose money through its adoption.

Dent also argued, Stofberg said, that a person owning a car 10 years old would pay as much as a person owning a new car of the same weight.

In Agriculture

Hoyt Heads Bureau of Entomology

Avery S. Hoyt, associate chief of the Agriculture's Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine since 1941, has been appointed chief of the bureau effective today, department officials have announced.

Hoyt

Hoyt has served as acting bureau chief since the death of Dr. P. N. Annand March 29. He lives at 100 N. Edison st., Arlington.

A native of San Diego, Calif., Hoyt holds a B. S. degree from Pomona College. After his graduation in 1910 he was employed in California State horticultural quarantine work for 11 years. In 1921 he resigned and went into business.

Hoyt served as Director of Agriculture for the California State Department from 1928 to 1931, when he joined the Federal Government as assistant chief of the Plant Quarantine and Control Administration, which later was merged with the Bureau of Entomology. He was given a promotion for merit in 1942.

Married, Hoyt has one daughter. His hobby is gardening.

Rezoning for New Apartments In Chevy Chase Is Declined

The Montgomery County Council yesterday denied the application of Miss Virginia K. Casey, daughter of Eugene B. Casey, wartime presidential aide, for rezoning a 46-acre tract in Chevy Chase for apartment use.

The application was sought to pave the way for erection of a 10-million-dollar, 1500-unit apartment development near Connecticut ave. and Jones Bridge rd. at the rear of the Bethesda Naval Hospital.

In its opinion, the council said testimony presented at a public hearing on January 12 indicated that the development would create "extremely hazardous" traffic conditions and require new school and fire-prevention facilities.

In other action, County Attorney David Macdonald told the council at yesterday's meeting in Rockville that the Maryland court of appeals, in an unusual move, has agreed to rule on the validity of the county taxicab ordinance which was declared invalid several months ago by the county circuit court.

The circuit court ruled in favor of John S. Bigelow, Bethesda cab driver, who recovered $203 in registration fees posted under the ordinance.

The county's right to retain some $8000 in fees collected, hangs on the appellate court verdict, Macdonald said.

The council also approved a purchase contract for approximately 40,000 square feet of land at Perry and Jefferson sts., Rockville, for about $70,000 as a site for a new county office building.

The action was taken after the board of education agreed to transfer title to the adjoining Welsh Field to the council for additional building grounds.

In other business, the council adopted ordinances concerning the licensing and zoning of private and educatioal institutions. It also scheduled for public hearing at 7:30 p. m. June 1 at the courthouse proposed ordinances dealing with licensing, zoning and health regulations for hospitals, nursing homes and sanitariums.

Eisenhower's News

There was a lot of meat in General Eisenhower's observations on the press at the annual luncheon of the Associated Press. "We must be strong informationally as well as intellectually," he said. That calls for full and comprehensive reporting of the facts. Alas, there is so much official sitting on facts (as well as secrets) nowadays that the newspaper is greatly hampered as an intelligent record. Moreover, a digest of obvious facts is not enough to achieve the purpose that the general has in mind of informing the people. The truth is not necessarily equivalent to a bare recital of actual happenings; examples range all the way from news in China to the McCarthy hearing and to the incidents in Russo-American relations. More than ever in this iceberg era the news calls for "evaluation," to use the general's word, if significance is to be gleaned. This is recognized by General Eisenhower in his defense of columnists, upon some of whom some newspapers lean for courage. We would go further than the general and say that the old canon of American reporting—namely, an objective presentation of what takes place—has to be supplemented by interpretive reporting. More and more are the newspapers coming around to this, and it is a necessary development in fulfilling the newspaper's duty to its readers. Honest interpretation looms much bigger than spot news as a newspaper function in these responsible days of the American democracy.

Crime Facts First

In considering the specific bits of Federal crime legislation now before it, Congress ought not to lose sight of the fact that these are secondary to the major need. That need is for a searching investigation of interstate crime as proposed in the Kefauver resolution. Facts are essential before there can be wise legislation to foil the crime syndicates, and in this respect the Attorney General, in presenting two bills, has placed the cart before the horse. What is more disturbing, there is reason to believe that the Attorney General's bills are being used as a diversionary maneuver to reduce the pressure for the Kefauver resolution.

The particular bill now before the Senate Interstate Commerce Subcommittee would prohibit the interstate use of telephone, telegraph and radio facilities for the transmission of gambling information, and would put the policing job on the doorstep of the Federal Communications Commission. There is no doubt whatever that these facilities are the tools of much illegal gambling. However, we agree with FCC Chairman Coy that the "vague definitions of prohibited types of information" in the bill "can lead only to confusion, evasion, and, in all probability, failure of the law to achieve its objectives." The bill would give the FCC an impossible administrative task and open up endless litigation by requiring it to determine what is illegal information as opposed to legitimate news about sports events.

Much more sensible, we believe, is Mr. Coy's substitute proposal. The real heart of gambling information, he asserts, is data on bets, odds and prices paid. This is information the only real use of which is for illegal purposes such as bookmaking and the numbers racket. There is ample precedent in the lottery laws for making the transmission of such data a crime. Moreover, a prohibition so defined would not impair the transmission of legitimate sports news. Such a prohibition of course would not stop all gambling, but it would aid the States in enforcing the law—and that is the prime purpose of Federal legislation in this field. To be sure, the FCC ought not to be relieved of policing responsibility, and we believe it ought to act more vigorously in this respect than it has in the past. But the real job of prosecution ought to fall, not on a regulatory commission, but on United States attorneys.

All this, however, is incidental to the necessity for proceeding with the Kefauver interstate crime investigation. That investigation has been sabotaged, first by the Democratic Policy Committee in recommending a joint Judiciary-Interstate Commerce Committee investigation, and secondly by Majority Leader Lucas. Mr. Lucas contrived to delay the resolution until after the ECA debate—and on balance, of course, ECA is more important. But the stalling tactics are beginning to smell. If there is any more dodging, Mr. Lucas, however artful his protests, will stand identified as the man who does not want to see a crime investigation.

Full Circle

It has always been our feeling that Jordan's King Abdullah and the Israelis, if encouraged to do so, would have been able to compose their dispute over Palestine. This at last has been accomplished by the two parties acting alone—but not before gallons of blood have been spilled, the United Nations undermined, Arab-Jew relations embittered, and nearly a million Arabs made homeless. The announcement has just come out of Amman, Jordan's capital, that on Monday the King formally annexed Arab Palestine and the Old City of Jerusalem. Thereby Abdullah thumbs his nose at two institutions: The United Nations and the seven-nation Arab League. When the fighting over Palestine had subsided, with Abdullah's Arab Legion and the Israelis sharing Jerusalem, the United Nations, which had let the two fight it out, blandly proposed an international regime as if nothing had happened. As for the benighted Arab League, this group, at its recent conference in Cairo, sought to prevent any disposition of Arab Palestine. It threatened sanctions against any member that took over part or all of Arab Palestine. It further required a return to the partition boundaries of 1947—i. e., the General Assembly's resolution which it has all along rejected—as the basis of peace talks with Israel. The decisions would be funny if they did not hide tragedy; time doesn't stand still with the Arab League, it goes back, and the wonder grows that its antics are taken at all seriously.

Yet this has always been the attitude of the nineteenth century British Colonial Office, to whose initiative the Arab League owes its creation. The league was supposed to be a bulwark of the British imperial interest against change as well as communism. It was always more myth than reality. Yet British agents continue to throw dust in the British government's eyes about its power and solidarity. In the very last debate in the House of Commons Mr. Bevin lavished praise upon this model of impotence and intransigence. The British temperament, however, is not given to treating fiction as fact, and the London Times has just administered a resounding rebuke to the government for impeding peace-making in the Middle East by shoring up the pretensions and sharing the blind reaction of the Arab League. The only "sensible" policy, the newspaper says, is Jordan's, namely, to reach "a comprehensive understanding with Israel." And the only "sensible" policy for Britain is "to seek a real understanding among all the countries concerned—including Pakistan, Persia, and Turkey, as well as the Arab states and Israel—instead of looking to the Arab League alone to discharge responsibilities for which its narrow basis and restricted outlook quite unfit it."

Would that all this had been said a long, long time ago! Lack of attention to realities has characterized policy toward Palestine since the onset of the reference of the controversy to the United Nations. The noxious Grand Mufti (who turned up as the evil genius behind the scenes at the Cairo conference) was regarded as the spokesman for Arab Palestine, his Arab Higher Committee was treated at Lake Success as authority, and the Arab League was looked upon as a combination of martial nations capable of leading a jihad, or holy war. This is the policy that precipitated the blood-bath in Palestine. And now the Arab League, flapping a whisk broom as ineffectual as Mrs. Partington's, is gesturing to turn back the clock, and demanding a collective peace with Israel on the basis of the United Nations partition plan of 1947. This it could have had in 1947, but the intervening war has created a new set of actualities, and peace terms, even the U. N. plan for the internationalization of Jerusalem, must correspond with these actualities. King Abdullah, long frustrated in world capitals in his quest for a practical solution, has now recognized them. His is an act of courage that should be backed in London by stopping its arms traffic (with which alone the Arab League retains the slightest prestige) and in Washington by ending its schizophrenia on the Middle East—and at Lake Success by a withdrawal of the resolution on Jerusalem.

Corroding Secrecy

Administration secrecy on the hydrogen bomb has received penetrating criticism in a speech by Gerard Piel, publisher of the Scientific American, before the American Society of Newspaper Editors. Putting together freely available information, Mr. Piel concludes (1) that despite the notion that the hydrogen bomb is a sure thing, there is a distinct possibility that we may not be able to make it at all; (2) that a long-time engineering problem is involved in any case; (3) that reliable estimates of its power "raise considerable doubt whether the H-bomb will be a useful and effective weapon if and when we get it"; and (4) that because the process necessary for the production of raw material of the H-bomb is similar to that used in the production of plutonium, we may have to reduce the output of ordinary atom bombs. Mr. Piel then asks whether it might not be wiser to expend the same effort in developing guided missiles, antisubmarine devices and a bigger stockpile of atom bombs.

It may be reasonably contended that there never was any real question whether to develop the H-bomb; in the light of the world situation it had to be undertaken. But there is a very legitimate concern over the failure of the Administration to tell the public what the decision means. Regardless of whether Mr. Piel is right in his conjectures, it is all too apparent that a dangerous illusion has been created. That illusion is that a problematical weapon somehow will make America safe. It is also apparent that the H-bomb effort may seriously jeopardize, or divert altogether, the program to develop atomic power for nonmilitary use. These are matters which ought to be known and debated publicly. Yet the lid of secrecy has been clamped on more than the H-bomb; there is as yet no public information on the Bikini tests, and the Atomic Energy Commission still is sitting on information about power reactors for industry.

Mr. Piel speaks feelingly as an interested party; the AEC ordered the destruction of 3000 copies of his magazine containing information which he says already had been published elsewhere. The corrosive effects of this creeping secrecy, which stultifies public discussion of even nontechnical policy matters, will get worse unless the President does something about it. The time is long overdue for a commission of public men to explore in nonsecret terms the issues raised for our society by the H-bomb. As the President temporizes, he might well ponder Lord Acton's maxim: "Everything secret degenerates, even in the administration of justice; nothing is safe that does not show how it can bear discussion and publicity."

Uneasy Rail Truce

Hope springs eternal, we know, but unless there is a radical change of tactics on the part of the railroad unions, there is very little reason to hope that the two-week strike truce will mean much. That strike has been called against four railroads to enforce a piece of pure featherbedding in the demand for a second fireman on diesel locomotives. The demand has twice been turned down by presidential fact-finding boards set up under the Railway Labor Act. It is hard to see what the National Mediation Board now can do unless either the unions alter their tune or the railroads accept an imposition totally against their own—and the public's—interest.

The core of the matter is the unwillingness of the railroad unions to work with, instead of against, progress. Dieselization—which, among other things, reduces the task of the fireman—should mean substantial savings for the railroads. Lowered rail costs in turn should mean more stability of employment and possibly—if savings are great enough—lower rates, more business and more employment. But the rail unions are still attuned to the conditions of a century ago. The demand for an extra do-nothing fireman is similar to all sorts of featherbed rules under which crews are paid, not for a day's work, but for what was a day's work years ago when trains traveled perhaps a third as fast as they do now.

In these circumstances there can be little public sympathy with a strike which would tie up a basic part of the transportation system for the purpose of saddling the railroads with a totally unnecessary added cost. If the unions want real security, they could work with the railroads to open up new opportunities to their surplus members instead of contributing to the decline of their own occupation. There is yet another factor. Every strike called for such an uneconomic purpose in the vital transportation field increases the demand for compulsory arbitration. The firemen, having exhausted the procedures of the Railway Labor Act, are legally free to strike. But if they value their freedom to negotiate without governmental restraint, they ought to think twice before risking it in such a transparent and insubstantial cause.

Fighting Communism

In his speech to the Federal Bar Association Monday evening, President Truman provided some much needed perspective on the fight against communism. "We know," he said, "that the greatest threat to us does not come from the Communists in this country, where they are a noisy but small and universally despised group. The greatest threat comes from Communist imperialism abroad, where the center of its military and economic strength lies. The real danger is that communism might overrun other free nations and thus strengthen itself for an ultimate attack against us." This is a danger that can be effectively checked and countered by cooperation with other free nations and by resolute strength and unity at home.

But the President and his Administration have not always presented the problem in this perspective. They are by no means free from responsibility for creating the panic atmosphere in which such wild charges as Senator McCarthy's now flourish. The pervasive fear of communism is not a fear invented by Senator McCarthy; it is a fear which, under the mask of superpatriotism, he has exploited and aggravated. It was high time for the President of the United States to say that "we are not going to turn the United States into a right-wing totalitarian country in order to deal with a left-wing totalitarian threat." For this has now become, having been too long ignored, the most urgent danger. We are not so much imperiled today by what the "noisy" and "troublesome" Communists can do to us as by what they may induce us, through the McCarthys, to do to ourselves.

"Cow Time"

A first reading of your "Cow Time" editorial of April 22 made me think it a humorous write-up, but the legislators' action year after year in failing to acknowledge or abide by majority opinion in favor of "fast" time can also be plainly interpreted as a nose-thumbing gesture to District residents that Congress has a foot on their necks and is going to keep it there as a constant reminder that no matter what they think on any subject Congress is the one to make the decisions.

Daylight saving time is assuredly in favor in any referendum from here to our northern border and has been in effect in practically all States along the Atlantic Coast since the end of World War I. Can all of these many millions of people be wrong about knowing what they want?

You can omit that hypothetical reservation in the last line of your editorial: in the eyes of Congress an Arkansas heifer definitely carries more weight on Capitol Hill than a District citizen.

SLIGHTLY BEWILDERED.
Falls Church, Va.

I have seen arguments against daylight saving—valid arguments by people whose living problems are aggravated. I have yet to see any really worth-while reason put forward for its adoption. Even the editorials are given over to intemperate and biased discussion. The so-called poll had better not have been taken; it seems so unfair.

Just because the device is used in northern Europe, where light and heat conditions are so different from ours, it doesn't follow that it is a valid procedure. Let's have a more thoughtful and adult discussion.

Oliver General Hospital

Two contributors to your esteemed paper, Marshall Andrews and Drew Pearson, have lately made such grossly erroneous allegations concerning the Army's Oliver General Hospital at Augusta, Ga., that I feel in justice to that excellent institution I can no longer remain silent.

Both Andrews and Pearson, the latter in his Merry-Go-Round column of April 22, have bemoaned the fact that this hospital is located far from the medical school of Emory University at Atlanta, and imply that the Budget Bureau and a congressional subcommittee under Representative Rivers of South Carolina are motivated only by "politics" in their endeavors to preserve this hospital at its present location. This is an outrageous slur on the first-class University of Georgia School of Medicine, which has been located in Augusta for more than a hundred years with a present medical and teaching force at least the equal of anything that Emory can offer.

Pearson ascribes the hospital to the Navy, which never had one thing to do with the institution. It was an Army hospital from the start. Both Andrews and Pearson make much of the nucleus of the hospital in an "old" and "ramshackle" hotel. Actually the hotel was a million dollar resort built in 1928 when a million dollars was real money. It was and is a fireproof and palatial structure located in parked grounds adjacent to several of Augusta's famous golf courses.

To this have been added several permanent Government structures, representing first and last an investment of several million more of the taxpayers' dollars. Nearby is the Veterans' Administration's Lenwood Neuropsychiatric Hospital, and the University Hospital operated in conjunction with the School of Medicine.

If being located in that balmy climate for treatment, near those superb golf courses, one of which is available for patients' use, and in that "ramshackle" palace of a hotel for treatment by an excellent medical and psychiatric staff can be called descending into a "snake pit," then, brother, I hope I go balmy myself.

Cherry Tree Memorial

On reading in your April issue that Mr. Yukio Ozaki, now 91, a liberal parliamentarian of Japan, had sent a memorial poem to Washington about the cherry trees in blossom—which 40 years ago, as Mayor of Tokyo, he had sent as a gift to the people of the United States to express Japan's gratitude for President Theodore Roosevelt's mediation in the Russo-Japanese war of 1905—the following "Hokku" (17-syllable Japanese verse) was written:

U-tsu-ku-shi-ki
Bi-ka-fu no sa-ku-ra
Shi-ju-nen ka-na!

Due to the play on words (a characteristic of Japanese verse) in the first and third lines, two English translations with somewhat different meanings are possible:

How beautifully
Fair Washington's cherries bloom!
Two score years they've grown.
or
What beautiful trees
Fair Washington's cherries are!
Think of them always.

You will note that the English versions are also in 17 syllables following the regular Hokku order of 5 syllables for the first line, 7 syllables for the second line and 5 syllables for the third line.

"D. C. As A Pawn"

Your April 18 editorial, "D. C. as a Pawn," tries hard to kick up a storm in a teacup about the possibility of a South Carolina "import" receiving the additional judgeship on the District Municipal Court. A veteran of the landlord-tenant division of that court, and subsequently an interested observer of the acts and consequences thereof of D. C. judges, this cynical citizen cannot see that it would make much difference to the average citizen who gets the judgeship in this city of shopkeepers.

It would hardly be fair at this point to credit either nominee with a head start. As one is a practicing D. C. lawyer and the other assumed to be a Dixiecrat, it is quite likely they would prove equally adept at dancing to the tune called by the powerful board of bumptious Babbitts that runs Washington.

Neither a South Carolinian nor a Dixiecrat, this writer, on the basis of the experience and observation mentioned above, believes that an "import" from South Carolina, or most any other place, might possibly raise the tone of the Municipal Court and doubts, on the other hand, that it would be possible to lower it.

Postal Service Cut

Are American citizens going to accept the proposed reduction in postal deliveries without protest?

Even though one is not in business his mail often has considerable importance. Why should legal notices of money payments, for example, be 24 hours in the postoffice? May not the postoffice be "biting the hand that feeds it"? There are other quicker and not too expensive means of communication. We will certainly use them if mail is to be delayed to such an extent.

Would not people rather have postage increased on letters and postcards, both foreign and domestic, than be so limited? What about the lay-off in personnel? Is it really good economy to increase unemployment? It would be nice to know if Congress will do anything about this situation.

Council-Manager Plan For D. C.

Spokesmen for the Board of Trade in opposing the Kefauver home-rule bill assert that the present form of government of the District of Columbia is satisfactory, except, perhaps, in some minor details. This was effectively refuted by Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, in a recent address before the Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association. General Young expressed his views in no uncertain terms. He characterized the District government as "sprawling, fractionalized and multiheaded," and said that there is "need for better coordination of governmental machinery."

As between the three most widely used forms of municipal government cited by General Young, the commission, mayor-council and council-manager forms, it is the opinion of municipal experts that the commission form is not well adapted to large cities, though it works well in smaller communities. In the commission form each commissioner acts as the head of a group of related departments or functions of the local government. All the commissioners together, as a board, pass upon matters of policy.

The magnitude and diversity of municipal functions in large cities make this system inefficient. It is better to have each department headed by a qualified administrator, experienced in the particular functions of his department, with all of them under the supervision and control of a single executive. This situation obtains in both the mayor-council and council-manager forms, but in the former the mayor also has veto powers over acts of the council, and thus controls policies as well.

By having control of policies in addition to administration and appointments, a mayor has the opportunity to build a political machine which, in some instances, results in practical negation of popular government. The council-manager form avoids this, and also makes it possible to choose a capable executive without regard to political considerations. The Kefauver bill would give the District a council-manager form of government.

General Young stated that he is taking no public position on the Kefauver bill or the general question of election or appointment of municipal officials. This is a proper attitude on his part, as incumbent of a job which the Kefauver bill would abolish. It is preferable to that of his namesake of the Board of Commissioners who, when confirmation of his reappointment was before the Senate, testified that he was "for" home rule despite the fact that he has consistently opposed all efforts to achieve it.

Measuring Men's Words

By Malvina Lindsay

Trial By Opinion

PEOPLE say "I wish I knew more about Budenz and Lattimore personally; what each is like, the real man, that is." Or "Exactly what kind of person is McCarthy, Service, General Thorp, Bella Dodd, or Browder?"

These remarks express the gropings of citizens thrown back on the ancient dilemma—assessing one man's word against another—that these days of congressional Communist stalking have revived. They also express the modern realization that a man's mental and emotional pattern must be understood in order to appraise his word.

Suddenly the venerable system of Anglo-American jurisprudence, developed through centuries to judge men's accusations against each other, fails the public in the jury box. For congressional inquiry does not follow court procedure. And it is made two-headed by politics.

Hence the traditional cry for facts winds up in a chase of intangibles. Testimony too nebulous for a court of law still has a bearing in public opinion on whether a man is, according to those two loosely defined adjectives, "disloyal" or "Communist."

THERE seem to be no solid documents or Exhibits A in the Lattimore case to settle everything neatly. No matter what a congressional committee may decide—and it may be a split decision—the citizen will make his own judgment, based largely on his measure of the men involved.

We may expect more and more of this sort of things as the cold war continues, and as charges made with congressional immunity do not face traditional testing in courts of law. What help then in his judging can the citizen expect from modern knowledge?

Technology has given him the lie detector. But its infallibility is questioned by some. Many persons are reluctant to surrender decisions involving another human being's standing, future to a gadget.

Psychiatry offers some enlightenment. It can warn how the memory of past incidents (on which so much depends in most loyalty investigations) can be distorted, colored by emotion, legends, the will to believe. It can warn of how even physical disease can influence viewpoints and remembrances. It can show how emotional patterns set in early life can develop an Achilles' heel in moral integrity. It can alert the one doing the judging to watch his own prejudices and emotional blind spots. But it cannot give the final answer.

Character witnesses are more likely to influence the average citizen's judgment. Here again their word must be assessed, their objectivity and integrity measured.

SO THE citizen-juror falls back largely on his common sense knowledge of human nature. In doing this he must first ask himself if the persons making accusations are acting in good faith. He must try to judge their motivations, whether these are based on patriotism, duty, ambition, resentment, fanaticism, gullibility.

Next he must assess the mental integrity of the men whose words are in dispute. How accurate in detail have their statements proved to be? How clear their memories? How consistent and dependable their past mental performance?

Then if he is truly trying to be objective he will examine their words, attitudes, personal behavior to find how emotionally stable they are. Finally, he will try to bring his own reason to appraisal of these things.

Even then he will grope desperately toward time honored procedures of justice. He will rummage for even tag-ends of facts. He will puzzle over the legal value of hearsay evidence. He will try to recall the concepts of justice he has heard judges give juries. For deep within him runs the tradition of centuries of a code designed to help men live in harmony and freedom.

Every congressional inquiry into the charge of disloyalty emphasizes the value of that code. A woman whose husband in a high Government post underwent two severe congressional grillings (with as much vindication as a congressional committee can give) said to this writer:

"I come from a family of lawyers. I used to be impatient with what I felt were the red tape, hair splitting and intricacies of our legal code. But now I realize why they developed—they are vital to a free human being's protection."

Divorce Custody

It seems to me, after witnessing thousands of divorce cases involving custody of minor children, that the editors of newspapers should hammer away at the great injustices and inhuman treatment fathers receive at the hands of judges who automatically award mothers custody of children.

Adultery and insanity are difficult to prove. Wives can be unfit mothers in a dozen other ways, but no attention is given to these other ways by the courts. What is wrong with our laws? How much longer must fathers be the victims of this great injustice before you editors take up the fight in editorials for a change or revision of the laws governing custody of children in divorce cases.

Matter Of Fact

The Hidden Crisis

ROME.—In the last year and a half, this old city has been, as it were, gilded with a splendid appearance of prosperity. The Italian recovery, which is now as complete as any recovery can be, wholly fails to solve all the really basic social and economic problems. There are vast gaps, but the surface, always exquisitely beautiful in Rome, in any case now positively glitters.

But immediately below the surface, moreover, there is a hidden crisis of the utmost significance to the United States as well as to western Europe. The whole effort to organize the defense of the Western world against Soviet aggression is in fact now in danger of breaking down.

In order to understand what is happening, one must go back to the beginning of the planning of the defense of the West under the Atlantic Pact. The spadework was done, for reasons which must be examined later, in the closed circle of the so-called Atlantic Pact standing group. This body, headed by Gen. Omar Bradley, and comprising representatives of the staffs of the more important Atlantic Pact nations, labored for many months to produce two fundamental papers.

The first paper was a seclusive plan for the defense of the West. The second was a list of requirements—of weapons, of bases and of man power—to make this strategic plan a real thing.

WITH ALMOST no strength in Europe and with America disarming as a result of Secretary of Defense Johnson's "economies," the program was necessarily ambitious. Powerful European ground forces had to be built up and ground defenses had to be designed. Western Europe had to be defended securely in the air, naval forces provided to protect the ocean, supply lines provided. Strategic air bases had to be prepared to assure immediate retaliatory air attacks in the event of Soviet aggression.

Furthermore, the time allowed was very short. The year 1953 is the moment when Russian war preparations will reach their first climax. It was necessary to provide at least a skeleton defense by 1953, with 36 fully armed divisions in being in Europe by that date. In the final phase, in 1955, European ground forces were to be considerably more than 50 divisions, with all other arms in balance.

This was the program that was presented some weeks ago to the assembled Atlantic Pact defense ministers at The Hague. Significantly, it was considered adequate by all those at the meeting. France alone entered reservations about the future German participation in the Western defense efforts. With this exception, the program was approved in toto and unanimously.

ESPECIALLY at this point, however, it began to be clear that a heavy price would have to be paid for Secretary Johnson's decision to dissolve the State Department-Defense Department partnership, which had been so close before he took office. Because the planning of this had been isolated in Washington, it had also been isolated in Europe. Until The Hague conference of defense ministers and chiefs of staff was so triumphantly concluded, none of the really important problems of Western defense, political or social, economic or fiscal, had ever been explored on the highest governmental level.

The list of requirements to carry out the program approved at The Hague demanded a very great effort by every European partner in the Atlantic Pact. With almost no exception, all these nations are already strained to the limits of their strength and resources by the task of postwar reconstruction. If Secretary Johnson and Secretary of State Acheson had been continuously working together, with their opposite numbers in Europe, all the leaders of all the European governments might by now have been educated in the dimensions of the problem. The ways might also have been found by now to balance the American contributions against the special kind of European contributions, which would not have threatened the precarious recovery that Europe has achieved.

Instead, the heavy list of requirements agreed upon at The Hague came as a rude shock to almost every European leader outside the charmed circle of the chiefs of staff and defense ministers. Here in Italy, Prime Minister De Gasperi and Finance Minister Pella were plainly appalled by costs they could not meet. Since Italy, however, is after all a lesser partner, the Italian government waited to see what would be the reaction of the key Western union powers and Benelux countries.

SOME DAYS AGO, a full and representative group of cabinet ministers from Britain, France and the Benelux countries met at Brussels. After the shortest examination, they concluded they could not foot the bill for The Hague program. Ambassador Lewis Douglas was hastily summoned from London, confronted with this unanimous decision, and requested to inform Washington that the defense of the West could not be organized without much larger American contributions.

This, of course, had been obvious from the first. As has been often stated in this space, an increase in the American effort of from three to six billion dollars annually is clearly necessary until a solid Western defense has been built up. As matters stand, however, we face the grave danger of the whole problem being deferred. The Europeans cannot and, therefore, will not make the necessary extra effort at this time. Because of the way the problem has been handled by the Defense Department, it is really almost inconceivable that the needed additional resources will be provided at this late date by the American Congress.

All this may seem unimportant and academic. But the grim central fact which cannot be escaped is that the year 1953, when Russian war preparations will be completed, will be a year of utmost danger. If the West now throws away the 12 months of the short time that is still allowed for organizing a solid defense, the consequences can be disastrous. This is a heavy price to pay for American officials who do not know their business and are more interested in furthering their own ambitions than in performing their great tasks. Because so much time has been wasted, it is now more than ever necessary for the leaders of the West to tackle urgently, seriously and practically the vital defense problems.

Air National Guard

By Marquis Childs

Waste Of Defense Funds

THAT OLD EXPRESSION about a new broom sweeping clean could apply to the changes that are taking place in the defense establishment. Thomas K. Finletter is taking over as Secretary of the Air Force and Stuart Symington as head of the National Security Resources Board.

Childs

It is hardly a secret that, in his last months as Secretary for Air, Symington was in sharp disagreement on several issues with Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson. It is also hardly a secret that certain decisions taken at the top have had the result of giving the Nation less air defense for each dollar spent than could be obtained if some of the political fat was heroically cut away.

Some time ago in this space it was stated that defense funds spent on the Air National Guard were to a considerable degree wasted. The amount being spent this year is $114,690,000 and the figure asked for 1951 is $103,935,000.

A number of Air National Guard officers have written to me to challenge this statement. They protest that they are honestly trying to contribute to America's defense, and they undoubtedly are. They want to know on what basis of expert knowledge I passed this judgment.

I was not, of course, trying to give any personal judgment because I do not have the expert knowledge to make such a judgment. I was reporting the opinions of high-ranking officers of all three services. Air Force officers might, as the National Guard maintains, be jealous of the independence of the Air National Guard. But the same opinion is expressed in private by men in the other services with expert knowledge of the Nation's over-all defense needs and how they are being met. The Gray board after a careful and exhaustive investigation recommended against independence for the Air National Guard.

QUITE APART from the money being spent, this is a serious matter. For the defense of America the Air Force in being includes the air groups of the Air National Guard. If those groups do not measure up to standards of efficiency and performance, then our defenses are weaker than we think.

In all probability some of the groups do measure up to the standards rigidly enforced in the Air Force. But a further check makes it pretty clear that many do not; that some groups are hardly more than holiday occasions for World War II airmen who like to fly.

In Virginia charges were brought against Maj. L. H. Waters, jr., commanding officer of the Virginia Air National Guard. He was accused by officers in his command of a whole series of irregularities concerning the use of Guard planes and Government property. Waters' response was to dismiss the complaining officers and he was promptly cleared by the adjutant general of the State.

At the same time Civil Aeronautics Administrator D. W. Rentzel issued a complaint against Waters charging 24 separate violations of civil air regulations. Most of the violations charged occurred while Waters was leading an acrobatic team flying F-47s in a series of air shows at county fairs around the State. Waters was pilot of the National Guard plane that former Gov. William M. Tuck used during his term of office.

NUMEROUS instances have been reported of the way in which Governors use National Guard planes for their private and personal use. When Gov. James (Kissing Jim) Folsom of Alabama was paying court to one of the daughters of Gov. Earl Warren he flew to California and back in a Guard plane. The cost of flying that plane is estimated conservatively at $120 an hour.

Other Governors are more scrupulous. They try to avoid use of Guard planes for other than official purposes that might be justified.

The National Guard Bureau is hardly in a position to rebuke Governors who have Air Guard funds spent on putting plush interiors in the planes they have for their personal use. Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, chief of the National Guard Bureau, had $68,000 spent on converting a plane for his own use. It should be added that part of this went into radio equipment rather than plush.

Some of the letter writers said: Why talk about this waste when so much Government money is being wasted in other ways? This is apparently on the theory that a little more waste won't do any harm.

But any waste of defense funds, in view of the pretty drastic economies already carried out, is perilous.

The new Secretary for Air must look into all the corners. If money is being wasted, he must stop the waste even though he offends the sensibilities of some sensitive politicians.

KNOW YOUR WATERWAYS

Wonder City of the Southwest

Houston, Texas, once a small inland community, 50 miles from deep water in the Gulf of Mexico, is now a world port—third largest in the nation and greatest city in the Southwest. Why? The ship channel. The initial 25-ft. project was completed in 1914. To keep pace with the development it began, it has been continuously improved since. The population of Houston in 1910 was 78,800. Present population is close to 600,000. Such examples of growth can be cited again and again, with civic initiative and resourcefulness and waterway improvements the primary causes. Many other opportunities exist throughout the entire federal waterway system. And the construction of more connecting and feeder channels will add greatly to the value of many waterways that are now without them.

Hecht Co. Net Sets New Peak Of $3,894,100

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Hecht Co. last night reported record net income of $3,894,100 for the fiscal year ended January 31, 1950, equal to $4.94 a common share.

S. M. Hecht

This compared with $3,695,821 or $4.67 a share in the previous fiscal year.

Net sales of the retail chain, whose largest single department store is in Washington, advanced to an all-time high of $84,029,871. This was a gain of 1.6 percent from $82,709,003 in the 1948 fiscal year.

President Samuel M. Hecht, in the 75th annual report to shareholders, pointed out that the company's gain last year took place "despite the trade-wide decline of 6 percent in department store sales."

Net working capital, he added, increased $2,027,280 to $25,381,966 at the end of the fiscal year. Accounts receivable rose by $2,788,315 to $20,985,123. Merchandise inventories, on the first-in, first-out basis principally, amounted to $9,361,019 at the lower of cost or market. The inventory on hand represented 52 days' sales compared with 54 days as of January 31, 1949.

Commenting on the outlook, Hecht said the company looks forward to continued growth. He told stockholders that "in keeping with this goal, a new branch store to serve Arlington and Fairfax Counties . . . has been authorized by the board of directors."

BANK PROFITS: Net income of national banks in 1949 totaled 475 million dollars, including securities profits, Comptroller of Currency Preston Delano reported. For 1948, net on the same basis totaled 424 million dollars. Last year's net was equal to 8 percent of capital funds, while in 1948 it was equal to 7.4 percent.

ODD LOTS: The Merrill Foundation has granted $10,000 to the Institute of World Affairs for support of a research project on the problems of financing world economic development . . . Sears, Roebuck profits are running better than a year ago although April sales have been disappointing so far, stockholders were told . . . Kennedy C. Watkins of Treasury Department will address members of D. C. Institute of Certified Public Accountants at a meeting tonight in the Mayflower . . . Pan-American Airways plans to spend nine million dollars this year to encourage travel to Latin America . . . Directors of General Mills, Inc., voted to redeem the entire issue of 10-year, 2¼ percent debentures due to 1954.

NEW COURSE: The American University will inaugurate a new course in life, fire and casualty insurance, starting this summer. Instructors for the evening sessions will be George J. Link of Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. and Bernard T. Dodder, president of the agency bearing his name.

Mrs. Muchmore is assistant director of the Better Business Bureau . . . Robert E. MacNeal has been elected president of Curtis Publishing Co, succeeding Walter D. Fuller who was made board chairman . . . Hal Babbitt, director of public relations for Kaiser-Frazer Corp., has been elected a vice president . . . Chicago Grain

Chicago, April 25 (AP).—Soybeans moved in a wide range today, and their nervous performance unsettled other futures at the Board of Trade.

During the erratic session all deliveries of soybeans made new seasonal highs, with May selling at 82.99¼, the highest price paid for any delivery since 1948.

Silver Spring Fathers, Sons Hear Lane

A high degree of morality, reciprocating family love and a high degree of public intelligence are necessary to the maintenance of our way of life in the atomic age, Governor William Preston Lane of Maryland said last night.

Governor Lane spoke to about 200 at the Father and Son banquet of the Woodside Methodist Church Men's Club, held at the church in Silver Spring.

"We're living under a cloud of constant fear of an ideology that seeks to tear down the very thing you exhibit tonight—the reciprocated love of father and son," the Governor said.

"Be right with yourselves," Governor Lane urged the boys, "and you'll be right with everyone else."

Max Farrington, director of athletics at George Washington University, said it was important in the development of boys for fathers to participate personally—not to leave the job to boys' clubs and other agencies.

Joe Tereshinski, veteran of the Washington Redskins, let the youngsters in on the secret of his success: lots of food, plenty of sleep and no bad habits.

Ed Berrang, another Redskin end, was also a guest at the dinner.

Parking Meter Plan for Mall Hits Barrier

A proposal to install parking meters on roads along the Mall was stymied yesterday when it was learned neither District nor Federal officials have authority to do it.

Last fall National Capital Parks asked the District Commissioners if they would be interested in installing about 300 meters at five locations on the Mall. They would have been placed near the National Gallery of Art, National Museum, Smithsonian Institution, Washington Monument and Lincoln Memorial to make available parking space for out-of-town visitors.

Yesterday, Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West advised the Commissioners the District may install meters only on streets under District jurisdiction. The Mall comes under NCP jurisdiction.

At the same time Edward J. Kelly, assistant to the superintendent of National Capital Parks, said Government attorneys, have told NCP it does not have authority to install meters. "We do not anticipate seeking such authority," said Kelly.

2 Bills Seek U. S. Playsite In Bethesda

Bills to convert a 32-acre Federal tract in Bethesda, Md., to recreation use were introduced in both houses of Congress yesterday.

The tract adjoins the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Recreation Center on Norwood dr. The present recreation area totals about 17.5 acres. The 32-acre tract would be added to the recreation center if the bills become law.

Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) and Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.) introduced the bills. They were referred to the Congressional Agriculture Committees.

The 32-acre tract is under control of the Agriculture Department. It recently figured as a possible site for the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, until FAO chose Rome for its headquarters.

The Tydings-Beall measure is expected to have the strong indorsement of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission. That agency has been negotiating for some time with the Agriculture Department to obtain the site for recreation.

William C. Burrage, planning engineer for the Maryland commission, said the tract is bounded by the subdivisions of Kenwood on the west, Somerset on the south, Chevy Chase Terrace and Chevy Chase Gardens on the east and the Bradley Boulevard Apartments on the north.

The land is part of the area formerly used as the Agriculture's Animal Disease Station.

Helen Miller Will Not Run In 8th District

Charlottesville, Va., April 25 (AP). Helen Hill Miller announced yesterday it would be impossible for her to seek the Eighth District Democratic nomination for the House of Representatives in opposition to Representative Howard W. Smith.

She made known her decision after spending the weekend trying to arrange her duties as head of the American office of the London Economist in Washington to make the race possible.

Mrs. Miller, wife of Francis Pickens Miller of Farmington runner-up to Gov. John S. Battle in last summer's four-way Democratic gubernatorial primary had said earlier she was considering entering the primary.

Alexandria Hospital Directors Sustain Firing of Nurses' Head

The directors of the Alexandria Hospital have sustained the unexplained dismissal of Mrs. Irene M. Roszel, superintendent of nurses, with a proviso that she be given six months extra pay and professional recommendations.

The board's action was announced in a brief statement yesterday, following a closed meeting Monday night at the hospital. The statement said the decision was reached "after hours of deliberation and consideration," but failed to shed any light on the reasons for Mrs. Roszel's dismissal.

Reports that Mrs. Roszel, who also is director of the hospital's nursing school, would not be reappointed to either of her two positions June 1 were confirmed two weeks ago by Van C. Adams, the hospital's administrator. Both Adams and Mrs. Roszel, however, have declined comment on the action.

Protests against the dismissal and the "manner in which it was handled" have come from several organizations as well as groups of citizens. Mrs. Roszel has been with the hospital 26 years, 13 of them as superintendent of nurses.

A spokesman for the board said 18 of the 19 members present at Monday night's meeting voted to sustain Adams' action. Arthur I. Shaffer, a newly-elected member from Fairfax County, declined to vote after saying he was not familiar with the question.

Methodists Add To Membership In North Virginia

Exactly 2500 new members have been added to Methodist Churches of the Alexandria District, Virginia Conference of the Methodist Church, since October 1 of last year.

This was one report received yesterday at an all-day session of the annual District Conference, held at Mt. Olivet Methodist Church, Arlington. In addition, nearly $165,000 has been paid out by these churches in salaries to the clergy and in contributions to missions and other causes.

Leaders in new membership were the Arlington Methodist Church, Clarendon Methodist Church and the Calvary Methodist Church.

Representatives of 100 churches in the conference voted to ask for reappointment of Dr. J. Calloway Robertson of Alexandria as district superintendent for his sixth year.

Yanks Stagger by A's, 6-3; Henrich Reinjures Knee

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

BUCKY HARRIS, the old philosopher, was quite unimpressed with the four-hit batting attack of his Nats against Boston's Al Papai the other night. "But I will accept our victory," said Harris. "Nobody asks you in September how you happened to win that game on April 28."

THE YANKEES, whose latest offer for Ray Scarborough comprised five players plus cash to the Washington club, now are in something of a dilemma. They don't know whether to acquire Scarborough or leave him with Washington so he can continue to knock off the Red Sox. He's done it 10 times in 15 starts in his lifetime.

POVICH

THE RED SOX players who voted to bar newspapermen from their dressing room until 30 minutes after the games end, are still being chided for their action. On the train that brought the team to Washington, Dom DiMaggio unwittingly poked his nose into the smoking room where the Boston writers were assembled. "Outside!" they roared. "All players barred from the press room until 30 minutes after train starts."

WHEN GIL Coan scored the Nats' winning run against the Red Sox the other night, the victory was a legacy from the regime of Joe Kuhel. When the American League rewrote the "obstruction" rule, giving baserunners the benefit of the doubt, Kuhel drilled Coan in the art of running into infielders and saddling them with the obstruction penalty.

RAY SCARBOROUGH was unabashed in Florida three weeks ago when the Springfield, Mass., club belted him for 17 hits in seven innings. "I've never seen these hitters before, I didn't know how to pitch to 'em," he explained. He needs now to explain his three straight strikeouts of Tom Wright, Boston's clean-up hitter the other night, a chap on whom he had never before laid eyes.

WHEN THE YANKEES arrived in Philadelphia the other day, a local paper's headline moaned: "A's lack hurlers as Yanks arrived." The N. Y. Mirror's Ben Epstein described it as "The Unfinished Sympathy. The Yankees lack hurlers, too."

CLARK GRIFFITH'S 2157-game attendance streak in his own stadium ended Monday night when a severe cold kept him away from the game. "First home game I've ever missed since I came to Washington in 1912," he said. He turned out the television because it denies him a look at the whole field, and preferred to listen to the radio account.

DESPITE THE FACT that he sells the television rights for a hefty amount, Griffith is no television fan, is convinced video doesn't hurt his attendance. "It's no substitute for seeing the game," he says. "If they ever perfect it, though, I may be tempted to throw the television cameras out of the park."

ROY WEATHERLY, once with the Indians and Yankees, is coming back to the big leagues as an outfielder for the Giants, who bought him from the Coast League. Weatherly is the little fellow who is dubiously famed as the Cleveland Indians' greatest mistake. Cleveland, with its roster crowded, retained Weatherly and lost title to Tommy Henrich, who went to the Yankees as a free agent.

MICKEY GRASSO of the Nats was pleased to read that Max Schmeling passed all the de-Nazification tests in the British zone of Germany. "He couldn't have been a Nazi at heart," says Grasso. "When I was in prison camp in Waldorf, Schmeling came a long way to talk and visit with the Americans, and was bawled out for trying to slip us some cigarettes."

CONNIE MACK, in his modesty, all but predicted that his A's would finish in the cellar this year. Talking before the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, he picked Boston to win the pennant and mentioned every other club in the league before trailing off into his appraisal of the A's, saying "Unless the Browns finish last, we—. He said no more.

WHEN STEVE NAGY made his pitching debut for the Nats in New York against the Yankees the other day, he went to Bucky Harris and asked "How do you want me to pitch these guys?" Harris was brief. "You know who the good hitters are," he said. "I don't want to clutter up your head with a lot of instructions you won't remember. Just pitch me one of those good games I used to see you pitch in the Coast League and I'll be happy."

THE MAJOR league standings of yesterday were telling a strange story. They showed the last-place Cubs of 1949 leading the National League without a defeat, and the eighth-place Nats of last season in a triple tie for second place in the American League. Or maybe this is Leap Year.

Hatten Hurls 2-Hitter for Dodgers, 3-0; Giants Win

Boston, April 25 (AP).—Joe Hatten shut out the Boston Braves with two hits today, 3-0, retiring 21 men in succession from the second to the ninth, for Brooklyn's fifth straight victory.

After Bob Elliott led off the second with a single, the Dodger lefthander mowed down 23 Boston hitters until he walked Connie Ryan with two gone in the ninth.

Sam Jethroe followed with a single, but both were stranded on Willard Marshall's roller to Hatten.

Brooklyn, setting a sizzling pace since its opening day loss to the Phillies, ganged up on Vern Bickford for all its runs in the third. It was his first loss to Brooklyn. Superior bunting ability told the story.

Roy Campanella walked with one out. Bickford was in a jam when he threw too late to second base after grabbing Hatten's sacrifice bunt. When Campanella slid into second Boston Shortstop Buddy Kerr was spiked. He resumed play after a 6-minute rest. Then Bickford walked Pee Wee Reese to load the bases.

George Shuba's fly to Sid Gordon scored Campanella with the first run. Duke Snider singled home Haten. Jackie Robinson's surprise bunt down the third base line went for a single, driving in Reese. It also ended the inning. Snider, thinking the ball foul, started back to first and was run down.

Giants Snap Four-Game Losing Streak, Whip Phils

New York, April 25 (AP).—Leo Durocher's New York Giants, aided by some Philadelphia butter fingers, registered their first victory of the season today, defeating the Phils, 8-4. The Giants had lost four straight.

Larry Jansen, the 30-year-old righthand ace, went the distance for the New Yorkers. He allowed eight hits, including a three-run homer by Dick Sisler in the sixth inning. Russ Meyer was charged with the loss.

Les Fleming, a .239 Hitter, Is Setting Coast League on Fire in RBI Dept.

San Francisco, April 25 (AP).—Long ago, baseball strategists fought off insomnia with a little ditty:

It's not home runs that win the games,
Take back your power guys;
A batting average ain't no good
Without those RBI's.

With this in mind then, let us pause for a moment of silent tribute to San Francisco's Les Fleming who, as of now, leads the Pacific Coast League's runs-batted-in department.

Fleming's batting average is a skimpy .239. Yet in 27 games, the Seals' first baseman has knocked in 29 runs.

2 Negroes Among 13 Picks

Caps Draft Schnittker, Sharman and O'Keefe

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Washington's Caps, who sagged artistically and financially last season, made some momentous draft choices at the NBA meeting in Chicago yesterday:

1. They drafted Ohio State's Dick Schnittker and Southern California's Bill Sharman, two of the Nation's outstanding collegians;

2. They also selected their first Negro basketball players—West Virginia State's Earl Lloyd, who performed for Parker-Gray in Alexandria, and Harold Hunter, captain of North Carolina College, CIAA champion;

3. They acquired rights to Georgetown's Tommy O'Keefe and Virginia's high-scoring Joe Noertker, two of the best players in this area.

In addition to 13 collegians, the local pros secured Ariel (Ace) Maughan and Don Putman from the defunct St. Louis Bombers.

* * * * * * *

Big Name NBA Choices

Here's where the big names landed among other NBA teams after yesterday's pro and college draft in Chicago:

Easy Ed Macauley, of the defunct St. Louis team, was grabbed by Boston; Frank Brian, league's third-leading scorer with Anderson, went to the Chicago Stags.

As was expected, Philadelphia used its territorial draft right on Villanova's great Paul Arizin, Nation's leading college scorer and most valuable collegian in the recent College All-Star-Harlem Globetrotter tour.

Other All-American selections included Baltimore's choice of Don Rehfeldt, Wisconsin; Charles Share, Bowling Green, to Boston; Irvin Dambrot, CCNY, to New York Kevin O'Shea, Notre Dame, to Minneapolis; Paul Unruh, Bradley, to Indianapolis; Larry Foust, La Salle, to Chicago; Don Lofgran, San Francisco, to Syracuse; Charles Cooper, Duquesne, to Boston; Bob Lavoy, Western Kentucky, to Indianapolis; George Yardley, Stanford, to Fort Wayne, and Chet Giermak, W.&M., to Rochester.

General Manager Bob Foster and Coach Bones McKinney expressed their delight—and surprise—in landing Schnittker, Ohio State's 6-foot-5 All-American. He was one of the most sought-after players at the meeting.

Ohio State Coach Tippy Dye is loud in praise of his ace. Schnittker was the standout of the brilliant Buckeye team that won the Big Ten title and lost to CCNY by 56-55 in the NCCA Eastern semi-finals despite his 26 points.

Also an end on Ohio State's Rose Bowl team, Schnittker is considered even better in basketball than football. He tallied 469 points in 22 Ohio State games last season, averaging 21.3 points.

Southern California's Bill Sharmon, 6-foot-3, is the man who broke Hank Luisetti's scoring record in Coast competition.

Drafting of the first Negro players in the pro league was a well-kept secret. Both Lloyd and Hunter worked out at Uline last week for Coach McKinney. In breaking the unwritten taboo, Boston also drafted Duquesne's Chuck Cooper and Fort Wayne selected Kentucky State's Ed Thompson.

Lloyd, 6-foot-5, played center and forward for West Virginia State. He's considered a rebound artist and excellent shooter from under the basket. Hunter, at 21, a year younger than Lloyd, is only 5-foot-10.

Georgetown's good - looking O'Keefe set a scoring mark of 1018 points at the Hilltop. He has played well in several postseason games, including one here with the College All-Stars against the Globetrotters.

Washington's complete draft list: Dick Schnittker, Ohio State; Bill Shatman, USC; Alan Sawyer, UCLA; Tommy O'Keefe, Georgetown; Claude Overton, E. Central State, Oklahoma; Warren Cartier, N. C. State; Jim Catheart, Arkansas; Joe Greenbach, Santa Clara; Earl Lloyd, W. Virginia State; Joe Noertker, Virginia; Harold Hunter, N. Carolina College; Bob Fisher, Regis of Denver; Frank Kusara, San Francisco U.

Richmond Snaps G.W. Streak, 8-6

Richmond handed George Washington's Colonials their first Southern Conference loss, 8-6, on the Ellipse yesterday.

G. W., which had won its last seven games, four in the conference, spotted the Spiders an 8-0 lead, and couldn't quite catch up.

G. W.'s first run came in the sixth on a pair of walks and Don Druckenmiller's single. The Colonials got two more in the seventh on a single by Art Kennedy, a walk to Chet Pietras and Joe Famulette's two-run single. In the eighth, Pietras blasted a three-run homer for the Colonials.

Hudson Hurls

Nats Skip To Philly for Night Game

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Nats are taking their tender, two-game winning streak to Philadelphia today and entrusting it to the care of Sid Hudson tonight in Shibe Park.

Hudson is making his second start of the season against the team he couldn't beat last week. On that occasion he invited disaster with his wildness, and it overtook him. The A's beat him, 6-1.

Tonight, the Nats will be meeting up with Alex Kellner, the surprising rookie lefthander who was one of the five pitchers in the league to achieve 20 victories last season.

Hudson draws the starting assignment due to yesterday's postponement here when the scheduled game with the Red Sox was weathered out.

The Nats are taking a morning train for Philadelphia in what should be a pleasant mood, having knocked off the Yankees and Red Sox consecutively in their most recent outings.

Their pitching to date has been of a type to amaze Manager Bucky

Raschi Goes Route, But Is Clipped For 10 Hits

Philadelphia, April 25 (AP).—Vic Raschi became the first New York Yankee pitcher to go the route today, staggering home with a 6-3 verdict over his old Philadelphia playmates. The Yank right-hander has a 12-1 lifetime success record against the A's.

Playing without First Baseman Tommy Henrich, who suffered a recurrence of his knee injury in batting practice, the Yanks slammed Lou Brissie for 13 hits, five of them doubles. Shortstop Phil Rizzuto had a perfect four-hit day.

Henrich's tender left knee collapsed in a freak manner as he stepped back to avoid a pitch by Fred Sanford. When he returned to batting stance, the knee buckled. Manager Casey Stengel replaced him with Joe Collins.

A chilled audience of 4371 saw the world champs bite off a 4-0 lead in three innings. They had to fight to hold it the rest of the way. Raschi, nicked for 10 hits, was helped out of trouble by three double plays.

Browns Start Too Late, Bow To Trucks, 5-2

St. Louis, April 25 (AP).—Virgil Trucks held St. Louis to one hit in seven innings, then weakened to give up two homers in the last two innings, but his Detroit Tigers teammates defeated the Browns, 5-2, here tonight.

Art Houtteman stopped the Brownie ninth inning threat with the bases loaded.

Hank Arft, batting for Pitcher Dick Starr, spoiled Trucks' one-hit shutout in the eighth with a long blow into the right field pavillion. Dick Kokos hit the same place to open the ninth.

Gerald Priddy and Johnny Groth homered for the Tigers, Priddy's coming in the third with a runner on.

Groth's blow, in the fifth inning with no one on base, was his ninth consecutive hit, but in the seventh frame he broke the chain when he popped out to Owen Friend.

It was all part of a bet McAuliffe made last summer not to shave until the Tigers held first place. He kept his beard throughout the winter. Photo at left shows him measuring his beard. Eugene Saraceni Gets Name In Print—Switches to Sarazen

(Editor's Note: This is another in a series of anecdotes about the colorful golf career of Gene Sarazen, who will appear in The Washington Post's National Celebrities Tournament June 3-4 at Army-Navy Country Club.)

By Gene Sarazen

I made my first hole-in-one when just beginning to play, and a friend phoned the story to a reporter he knew.

The next afternoon I camped at a newsstand until the papers arrived. I'd never seen my name in print before and riffled hurriedly to the sport section. Yes, there it was: Yesterday afternoon Eugene Saraceni scored a hole-in-one playing at the Beardsley Park Public Golf Course . . . I read the write-up over and over again, sometimes to myself, sometimes out loud for a change of pace and thrill. There was only one thing wrong: I didn't like the way my name looked in print nor the way it sounded. Eugene Saraceni didn't sound at all like a golfer's name. It wasn't crisp enough. It didn't come off the tongue like Chick Evans, or Jim Barnes, or Walter Hagen. Eugene—not a bad name for a violin player or a schoolteacher, but a rotten name for an athlete. Saraceni—it was too long and everyone used to irritate me by mispronouncing it. I wanted a name that suited me and golf. A name has to be right. It's a person's trade-mark.

SARAZEN

We had a small blackboard at home and at night I would sit before it chalking variations of Saraceni, experimenting with all kinds of letter substitutions. One night I added the letters z-e-n to the S-a-r-a. I tried it out several times aloud. I liked the way it sounded, rhythmic and definite. I checked the Bridgeport telephone directory. Finding no Sarazens listed, I concluded that I had invented a new name. I tried it with Gene instead of Eugene. No question about it, that was what I was looking for. From that night on I was Gene Sarazen.

Hudson Faces A's Tonight

Harris in an agreeable sort of way. Neither the Red Sox nor the Yankees were able to get a run off Ray Scarborough and Steve Nagy in a span of 15 innings.

Despite the fact that the Nats have lost both games in which Harris has switched to his right-handed hitting outfield, he'll make that switch against Kellner tonight. Sam Mele will replace Ed Stewart in right field, and Clyde Vollmer will go into left for Gil Coan.

Harris was babbling happily yesterday over Scarborough's shutout win against the Red Sox, but he was even more gleeful about the two double plays turned in by his infield that helped the righthander over a couple of spots.

"I'll have to say a nice word for Al Kozar," he said. "He showed me something on those two double plays. He was the middle-man in both of 'em, and he was getting over to second base with a lot of bounce he didn't have last season. The work we did in Florida wasn't wasted."

Harris' team, in its first five games, already has won as many victories as the last-place Nats of 1949 scored in their first 12 games.

Talk of a deal for Ray Scarborough has diminished in the Nats' front office. It is no secret that Clark Griffith and Harris had resolved to deal him off to the team that would offer the most player talent, but there is now no certainty he will be put on the market.

The Nats' bosses are wary of fan-reaction in Washington if Scarborough is traded, but they are reluctant on another score. They vision their club as far better than rated in the preseason estimates and, if they can dig up a bit more pitching, they view it as a first division possibility. They are in no mood to sacrifice pitching for what may be unneeded talent in other spots.

Magnet Outsprints Little Harp at Graw

Little Harp Runs Second, Binky B. 3d

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Havre de Grace, Md., April 25.—Magnet, with the majority of fans in a crowd of 6500 pulling for him, was a two-length winner here today. The 4-year-old son of Fenelon, performing in the colors of Walter P. Taylor of Houston, Tex., came from off the pace to opening daylight at the end of a six-furlong sprint named the Tolchester.

Mrs. Jimmy McGee's Little Harp was second with W. Y. Goldsborough's Binky B third, and Eddie Lawrence's Play Toy fourth in the field of five.

In making it three victories and two seconds since being shipped to Maryland from New Orleans, Magnet paid a mere $3.80 win mutuel and was clocked in a creditable 1:11 2/5 for the three-quarters over a track muddy as the result of rain.

Breckinridge Long's Radical, another favorite, accounted for the sixth race, the day's second best offering and fashioned for 3-year-olds. Jockey Carson Kirk of Silver Spring, Md., brought the colt from far back to win with daylight to spare.

Brookmeade Stable's Great Admiral, acquired for $34,000 as a yearling, was second with the Shamrock Stable's Lucky Harp third in the field of six.

The program opened with a victory for G. G. Rosenberger's Penny Hill, an $11 shot, ridden by Jockey Harry McGuignon. The daughter of Mr. Bones came from far back.

The second event was taken by Mrs. R. H. Heighe's Grenade, paying $21.20, and handled by Jimmy Duff. Grenade put the finishing touches on a $190.80 daily double pay-off on the 2-and-11 combination.

Anacostia Offers Facilities

Negro National Golf Open Scheduled Here Aug. 21-25

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

THE UNITED Golf Association's 1950 Negro National Open golf championships will be held here August 21-25, Brainard Bellfield, publicity director of the Royal Golf Club, sponsor of the event, announced yesterday.

Brainard said that such gallery attractions as Joe Louis, Ike Williams, Sugar Ray Robinson and 350 to 500 golfers from all over the United States are scheduled to attend.

S. G. Loeffler, operator of Washington's public golf courses, said that the facilities of Anacostia course have been offered to the Royal Golf Club for the event.

HOLES-IN-ONE made at the Fairfax County Club: Guy Pickett scored an ace on the 154-yard twelfth hole with a five iron. Guy was playing in a foursome with Paul F. Foeller, Jack Hight and James Reese.

Conrad E. Steiger popped his tee shot into the cup on Fairfax's seventh, using a six iron. The distance is 142 yards. He was playing with Capt. A. Louis Appleton, Chester Wysocki and Clifford Howell.

First-round play for the Maryland State golf team championships starts Sunday, April 30. The schedule:

Upper Half: Bethesda-Chevy Chase at Hillendale, Columbia at Washington, Congressional at Kenwood, Baltimore at Suburban.

Lower Half: Bonnie View at Rolling Road, Argyle at Prince Georges, Indian Spring at Manor, Country Club of Maryland at Elkridge.

Harry Phippeny, University of Maryland golfer, gave a pretty exhibition at Prince Georges yesterday.

Playing against Georgetown's Mahan, Harry opened with an eagle. His drive went to within 60 yards of the green on this 315-yarder. On the next stroke Harry pitched it in, giving him a two on a par four hole.

He birdied the second hole, shot par on the third, and birdied the fourth, making him four under par at that point.

Harry's sizzling pace faltered somewhat on the third nine, but he still shot a par 72.

Bill Bennings Says:

At Havre De Grace.

Dear Folks:

Trainer J. Bowes Bond hopes his hard luck of the last few days is on the wane. Here's what has happened. Monday morning his wife fell and broke a toe. Tuesday morning Tacaro Briar, owned by Bob Hall and trained by Bond, broke a leg and had to be destroyed. Tuesday afternoon Bond received word that a thief broke into his home, stole a diamond ring and a diamond bracelet. "I'm not exactly broke," smiled Bond, "but then, this thing could keep up." Alan T. Clarke's Senator Joe, a 2-year-old named for Senator McCarthy, failed to make a noise in his debut in the fourth race. E. B. Lee, of White Post, Va. trains horses well, but he's a novice compared with what Mrs. Lee can do with a steak. BILL.

Jury Frees Samakow In County Gaming Case

Judge Suppresses Evidence in Ruling Search During Raid Was Illegal One

A Prince Georges County jury yesterday took three minutes to acquit Philip Samakow, alias Phil Harris, of gambling charges growing out of mass raids in March, 1949, by United States Attorney George Morris Fay.

The decision came in the Upper Marlboro court after Circuit Court Judge Charles C. Marbury suppressed evidence seized at the time of Samakow's arrest. He told the jurors "your verdict should be not guilty."

Judge Marbury noted that Samakow was placed under arrest in the kitchen of a home at 3020 Queens Chapel rd., Avondale, Md. Government evidence against Samakow, including racing scratch sheets and alleged bet slips, was seized by United States marshals in another room in the house.

The exploratory search was illegal, the judge ruled, and granted a motion to suppress by Samakow's attorney, William H. Collins.

There was no search warrant in the case.

After the evidence was suppressed, Prosecutor Ignatius Keane, jr., told the court he had no additional evidence.

Under Maryland law a judge cannot direct a verdict of acquittal, but he can render an advisory opinion. Judge Marbury told the jurors there was "not sufficient evidence to justify a conviction."

Samakow, who lives at 1360 Peabody st. nw., was indicted in Maryland on charges of bookmaking and operating a lottery.

He was indicted in the District in April, 1949, for setting up a gaming table for the purpose of betting on horse races. The Government dismissed that case January 30, 1950, "for lack of evidence."

The Federal Diary stars on Page One today.

Bond Is Set For Two in Bribery Case

United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence yesterday continued until May 3 the arraignment of Dr. William A. Goodloe, charged with committing an abortion and conspiring to bribe a Government witness.

Lawrence also continued, in a separate hearing, the arraignment of Miss Alice L. Galusha, 26, of 1343 Clifton st. nw., on a charge of conspiring to bribe a Government witness.

Bond for the physician was set at $5000 on the bribery count and $2500 on the other. For Miss Galusha, $5000 bond was set.

The physician was arrested at his home, 1836 S st. nw., Monday night. Miss Galusha was arrested Saturday in Baltimore. Detectives in Baltimore allegedly overheard her try to bribe a witness not to appear against Dr. Goodloe.

Attorney H. Clifford Allder represented Miss Galusha at her afternoon arraignment, and substituted for Attorney Charles E. Ford as Dr. Goodloe's counsel in a morning arraignment.

On request from Allder, Commissioner Lawrence revealed the Government's complaint listed Miss Gloria Marie Huffman, of 1525 Northern pkwy., Baltimore, as a Government witness.

In Dr. Goodloe's arraignment, Assistant United States Attorney Andrew J. Howard, jr., requested the continuance, since, he said, a Government witness in the case had not arrived from Baltimore.

Police Arrest 4, Seize Bet Slips In Raid Here

A 61-year-old plumber and his two unemployed sons were among four persons arrested on gaming charges yesterday by vice squad detectives after a raid at 1351 4th st. nw.

They were Edward R. Richards and his sons, Walter E. Richards, 36, and Edward R. Richards, jr., 33, all of the 4th st. address.

Police also arrested Mary Johnson, 42, of 464 L st. sw.

Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the vice squad, led his men into the 4th st. address at 12:45 p. m. Strewn on a table in a rear first-floor room, Blick said, were numbers slips, baseball pool tickets and race slips.

Blick said that 23 baseball pool tickets were found in the pockets of Walter Richards. He added that $1027 was found at the scene but said the money was not seized.

The three men were charged with setting up a gambling table, operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips. The woman was charged with operating and possession.

They were taken before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence, who continued their cases until May 10. The men were freed in $2000 bond each and the woman in $500 bond.

Blick said the place raided had been under observation for about 10 days and that an undercover man made plays with marked money before the raid. The detectives had warrants for the three men, Blick said.

Private Conway's Dismissal From Force Approved

District Commissioners yesterday approved a Police Trial Board recommendation that Pvt. William I. Conway be dismissed for violating three police regulations.

Conway, a Tenth Precinct patrolman, was convicted of leaving his beat February 8 and of drinking and "necking" when on duty. In his appeal to the Commissioners, he attacked the board's decision because testimony was "erroneously admitted," asked for a new trial to submit further character evidence, and requested reduction of his sentence.

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West recommended denial of the appeal.

County Cuts Tax Rate by Seven Cents

Prince Georges Levy Will Be $1.90 for Next Year; Budget Set at $4,998,349

Reduction of 7 cents in the Prince Georges County tax rate was effected yesterday by the county commissioners.

The annual levy, amounting to $4,183,216, and providing for a $1.90 tax rate, was signed yesterday at the meeting of the commissioners in Upper Marlboro, Md.

The levy does not represent the entire amount of the annual budgetary items since an additional $815,133.62 will be paid from cash receipts from sources other than the levy, bringing the total budget to $4,998,349.62. Last year's total budget was $4,021,252.24 and necessitated a tax rate of $1.97 for a levy of $3,842,675.51. An increase of 25 million dollars in the assessable base of the county made possible the reduction in the tax rate.

School Budget Up

Largest item in the budget is for county schools, $2,367,248, and this provides all instructional services asked by the Board of Education, including clerks for larger schools to free principals for teaching duties. The school board had asked for $2,412,009, but deleted were items considered not absolutely necessary, such as fencing and grading school grounds, replacement of floors and other worn places, and similar repairs. The school budget last year was two million dollars. More than $600,000 is provided to pay for school bonds and interest.

Next largest operating item was the police department, for which $251,000 was allowed, an increase of $11,000.

Road construction is allotted $220,223.92, while county road maintenance is allotted a similar amount. The county engineer's office was allotted $88,260 as against a request for $93,360.

War on Rabies

In other actions yesterday the commissioners authorized Dr. Clarence J. Gibbs, county veterinarian, to conduct a campaign of rabies-prevention inoculations for dogs.

Also authorized was issuance of the remaining $850,000 in bonds for the metropolitan-district improvement program.

A delegation headed by William H. Cusick from Chillum asked that the commissioners improve and take over Chillum rd. between Riggs rd. and Greenlawn apartments, a distance of about one-fourth of a mile.

County Engineer Arthur Tayman reported that two rights-of-way are holding up the Benning rd. section adjacent to Marlboro Pike. He said that construction of the East Capitol st. bridge, which is expected, will result in heavy increase of traffic over this road, now little more than a series of large holes. Plans call for a 36-foot width.

Esso, Shell Raise Price Of Gasoline

The wholesale price of gasoline was increased nine-tenths of a cent yesterday by the Esso Standard Oil Co. and the Shell Oil Co., Inc., announced the same boost will be imposed starting today.

The Esso Company explained the increase "reflects the recent recovery in the Gulf Coast refinery market from the low level of last fall and winter, at which time there were general reductions in gasoline prices."

The firm hinted that still another hike may be in the offing, noting that even at the higher refinery prices "it is finding it increasingly difficult to purchase gasoline of the high quality needed to augment its own refinery production."

The Washington boost by the Esso firm is part of a rise in the marketing area from Maine to Louisiana averaging seven-tenths of a cent.

The Esso firm supplies about 350 retailers in this area and the Shell Company about 60.

Rummage Sale Planned

A rummage sale, sponsored by the Silver Spring Nursery School, will be held, starting today and running through Friday, at the old Methodist Church, Four Corners, Silver Spring. Sale hours will be from 1 to 9 p. m. The school is the oldest cooperative nursery in the Washington area.

Transit Firm Extends Pay Pact 1 Year

Company Proposes Arrangement on Basis of Award By Arbitration Unit

Capital Transit Co. yesterday reached an agreement with its union employes to extend the present contract, which ends July 1, for another year with no change in wages or working conditions.

The new contract was signed yesterday by E. D. Merrill, CTC president, and W. F. Simms and J. H. Cookman, president and financial secretary, respectively, of Local 689, Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America, AFL.

The company proposed extension of the current contract, Simms reported, and this was approved by the union membership.

The new contract, which will run to June 30, 1951, will incorporate new wage rates and working conditions handed down by a five-man arbitration board last December.

The board awarded an across-the-board wage increase of 10 cents an hour, bringing bus and streetcar drivers up to a top of $1.55 and mechanics to $1.68, besides changing holiday pay and other conditions.

The arbitration came as a last minute act to avert a strike threatened last July. Negotiations began in May and continued deadlocked up to the contract expiration on June 30.

Transit Fare Raise Hearing Resumes Today

The hearing on Capital Transit Co.'s request for a fare increase will resume today with cross-examination of J. E. Heberle, vice president and comptroller of the company. It will start at 10 a. m. in the District Building board room.

CTC has asked the District Public Utilities Commission to raise cash fares to 15 cents (now 13 cents), raise tokens to 6 for 80 cents (now 3 for 35 cents) and abolish the $1.75 weekly pass.

A citizens group yesterday asked People's Counsel John O'Dea not only to oppose the increase but to urge a decrease in fares. It contended the new ownership would not have bought a failing business. The group suggested municipal ownership as an alternative to higher fares.

Falls Church School Tax Hike Sought

The Falls Church School Board will ask for a 25-cent increase in the city's present $2.65 school tax rate when it presents its 1950-51 budget to the City Council Monday, it was learned yesterday.

City Manager Roy F. Dunn, however, said he will ask for no increase in the $1.90 tax rate which supports general city operations.

The proposed increase will bring the total city tax rate up from $4.55 to $4.80 per $100 assessed valuation.

According to School Board Chairman Mrs. Mark Regan, it is needed for debt service on the $700,000 school bond issue voted by city residents last fall for construction of one new primary and one new high school.

Actually, 50 cents of the tax rate will be needed for debt retirement, Mrs. Regan said. However, total cost of operating the city's present system will require only a $2.40 portion of the total rate this year, because of an increase in the city's total assessed valuation.

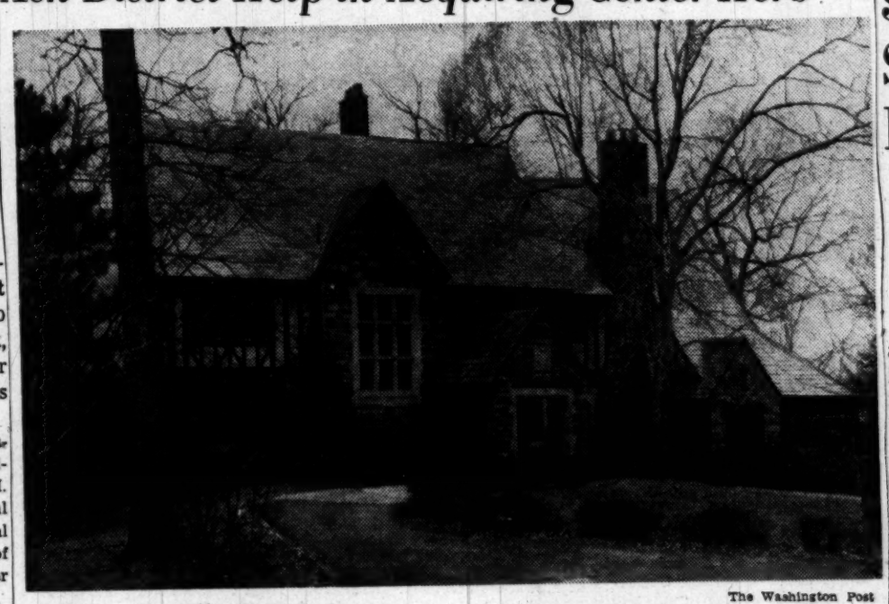
Dunn's statement that he will recommend continuance of the present rate came in the face of a prediction by City Revenue Commissioner A. Burke Hertz of a drastic drop in personal property tax revenues, next year, due to declining auto values.

Hertz said assessment on the approximately 1250 autos in the city, which account for "the bulk" of personal property tax revenues, will be about $500 lower, on the average, this year than last.

Valuations are based on reports of the National Used Car Market Report, Inc., as of January 1, 1950.

Thus the city would lose an estimated $28,500 in revenue through the lowered car values—almost 40 percent of this year's property tax revenues, and nearly 10 percent of this year's Falls Church tax revenues of about $320,000.

National 4-H Clubs, Blocked by Zone Board, Ask District Help in Acquiring Center Here



The Washington Post

CENTER OF CONTROVERSY—The Roper estate, 2700 Tilden st. nw., is wanted by the National 4-H Foundation of America, Inc., as a center for some 400 young people who convene here annually for the 4-H Club Camp, and as a meeting place for "small groups" coming here throughout the year. The District Board of Zoning Adjustment has turned down the proposal. Appeal will be presented at a District Commissioners' meeting Thursday

The National 4-H Club Foundation of America, Inc., appealed to Commissioner John Russell Young yesterday for help in finding a suitable location here for a permanent 4-H Club center.

Russell I. Thackrey, secretary-treasurer of the 4-H clubs, told Young the center is needed as a meeting place for "small groups coming here throughout the year for leadership training."

For 10 days each year, the center would be headquarters for some 400 to 500 young people convening in Washington for the National 4-H Club Camp. Thackrey made clear the youngsters still would be "housed and fed" in local hotels.

The 4-H Foundation has its sights set on the 8-acre, 19-room Roper estate at 2700 Tilden st. nw., but the organization was turned down last Thursday by the District Board of Zoning Adjustment.

The board rejected the proposal on grounds it felt the property, in a restricted residential area, would be used primarily for living quarters for groups visitings the city and would not be a "school."

At least two private schools are located in the area 4-H officials pointed out.

Thackery emphasized that 4-H activities here are entirely educational, that Congress, and the executive departments are, in effect, the "school."

At the zoning hearing last week several home owners living near the Roper estate protested.

Edgar Morris, chairman of the Board of Public Welfare and a member of the Washington Board of Trade, was one who protested. His home at 4001 Linnean st. nw., faces the Roper property.

Testimony of 4-H officials, he said, indicated they planned to house children there from time to time. He stressed the point that he is not opposed to schools, but does not want what he believes might become a boarding house.

In his letter to Young, Thackrey presented these points in support of a 4-H center at the Roper estate or elsewhere in the District.

"The zoning board has indicated that it does not believe our activities are proper for a residential area. We certainly do not feel they are proper in a commercial area," he said.

Suggestions that the center be located in the Beltsville, Md. area of the Agriculture Department would mean the end of the annual "camp" activity, now conducted in Washington hotels.

Opponents also fought the Roper estate proposal because it might take the property off the city tax rolls. Thackrey answered that one by stating an embassy is negotiating for the property, and if sold the estate will become tax-exempt.

Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Young, said last night he will present Thackrey's appeal at the Commissioners' Board meeting Thursday.

Robbery Established as Renner Slaying Motive, Brother Says

Robbery has been established by police as the principal motive in the Nassau, Bahama Islands, slaying of Miss Bettie Renner, Washington attorney, according to her brother, Frederick P. Renner.

The brother, who arrived here yesterday from Nassau with Miss Renner's body, said Nassau Police Commissioner G. H. Ranoe had authorized him to state that the robbery motive had been definitely verified.

He quoted Commissioner Ranoe as saying also it had definitely been ascertained that there had been no criminal assault on Miss Renner before the finding of her body in a well near Nassau last Wednesday.

Earlier reports had said a sex fiend had killed Miss Renner, 37-year-old blonde, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Renner of 1720 21st st. nw.

The police commissioner denied newspaper reports that her body was nude when it was found, the only missing article of apparel being her slacks, he said. There were marks of a violent struggle.

The investigation has shown that Miss Renner, who was vacationing, called at the Benedictine Monastery in Nassau on Tuesday, the day before she was found, to inquire for directions to another monastery.

A priest drew a map for her and she started out on her bicycle. She apparently took the wrong road at a fork, her brother said Commissioner Ranoe told him, for she was seen returning toward the fork, with a cyclist who may have been showing her the correct road. The cyclist has not been identified.

The Rev. Cyril Keating of Miami, first cousin of the slain girl, will celebrate solemn requiem mass at 10 a. m. today at St. Matthew's Cathedral, assisted by the Rev. E. Jerome Winter, pastor of the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, and the Rev. Edward A. Hughes, assistant pastor of St. James' Church, Mount Rainier. The Right Rev. Msgr. John K. Cartwright, rector of St. Matthew's, will preach the sermon.

Associate Supreme Court Justice Tom C. Clark was among the officials, lawyers and clergymen who paid tribute to the character of the slain woman attorney, a devout Catholic.

Honorary pallbearers for Miss Renner will include Judge Harold M. Stephens, chief judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals; Judge Matthew F. McGuire of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia; Assistant Attorneys General A. Devitt Vanech and James M. McInerney; Felix S. Cohen, senior New York partner of the firm with which Miss Renner was associated; Dean Brendan F. Brown of the Catholic University Law School; John Moriarty, an attorney and administrative officer for the Production and Marketing Administration of the Department of Agriculture, and Guido Pignatelli.

The Women's Bar Association of the District yesterday named the following honorary pallbearers for the funeral services today:

Municipal Court Judge Nadine Gallagher, Miss Marie Garrett, Mrs. Sarah Perrin, Miss Mary Baskin and Miss Sarah McGrann.

Honorary pallbearers from the District Bar Association will be:

Judge Edward A. Tamm of District Court, Judge Thomas D. Quinn of Municipal Court, Ivy Lee Buchanan, Robert R. Faulkner, Arthur C. Keefer, Irene Kennedy, Edison W. Mollohan, jr., Charlotte P. Murphy and Ellen Lee Parks.

Elks to Unveil Plaque Honoring War Veterans

J. Howard McGrath, U. S. Attorney General, will speak at 8 p. m. today at the unveiling of a memorial plaque to World War II veterans by the Washington Lodge No. 15, B.P.O. Elks.

The ceremonies will take place in the clubhouse ballroom, 919 H st. nw. The Elks Boys Band will give a concert.

'Peeping Toms' Solve Store Robbery Case

Hecht Co. store detectives proved yesterday the truth of the old contract bridge adage that "one peek is worth two finesses."

As a matter of fact, the officers proved that one peek sometimes can send a man to jail and solve a crime easier than six weeks of spadework.

If you don't believe it, ask Theodore R. Golod, 27, of 1639 Hobart st. nw., a clerk at the store. Golod pleaded guilty yesterday in Municipal Court to stealing $360 from the establishment. He was held under $1000 bond pending a probation office report.

Golod was assigned to carry cash each evening from the basement to a cashier on the second floor of the store. But somehow, the cash during the past six weeks was short periodically and the detectives investigated.

Deduction was brought into play. The amount of money was correct in the basement, and it was short on the second floor. Ergo, the theft must have occurred on the elevator, reasoned the detectives.

So, the officers clambered atop the elevator and bored two small holes. Friday evening, they peeked through the holes to find, they said, Golod with his hands in the money bags.

He confessed, saying that he used the money to buy clothes and pay bills.

Man Gets $50 Fine, Weekend in Jail in Attack on D. C. Girl

Beverly Hills, Calif., April 25 (AP). A Hollywood publicist, Fred Seelig, 41, pleaded guilty today to a charge of battery after a charge of raping a vacationing Government girl clerk was dismissed.

Seelig was fined $50 and Peace Justice Henry H. Draeger also decreed that he spend next weekend in jail.

Last Friday Seelig was booked on suspicion of rape after Miss Margaret Taylor, 24, 1902 C st. ne., of Washington, D. C., told investigators that he attacked her at his home after a round of cocktail bars. She said she met him at a drug store near her hotel.

Bandits Take $1,000, Flee Super-Freez Food Store

Registers Emptied; Patron Robbed By Pair of Thugs With Automatics

Two men, both armed with automatics, held up the Super Freez store, 723 11th st. nw., at 6:25 p. m. yesterday and got between $800 and $1000.

They also robbed one of the customers in the store of $35.

Five customers and six store employes, including the proprietor, Maurice Rosenfield, were in the shop when the gunmen entered.

One of the men walked to the meat counter and ordered some cold cuts. He then strolled casually to the checking counter, pulled out a gun and announced to a startled clerk:

"Okay, this is a stickup. Get out of that jacket."

Forced to Rear of Store

The bandit put the white jacket over his topcoat and motioned the clerk to get to the back of the store where the second gunman had herded customers and employes at gunpoint.

One customer, John Wilkerson, of 935 H st. nw., was ordered to hand over his billfold. One of the bandits emptied it of the $35 it contained and handed the billfold back to Wilkerson.

While his companion kept the customers and employes covered with a gun at the rear of the shop, the bandit who had donned the white jacket forced Rosenfield to go to the two cash registers and hand him the contents.

Ordered to Lie Down

Several customers came in the store during the holdup and were forced to the rear. The bandits commanded everyone to lie on the floor and not move while they fled. The one gunman stripped off the white jacket before he ran out.

Rosenfield, who lives at 9511 Bruce dr., Silver Spring, Md., told police he and his employes were preparing to close the store when the bandits entered.

The bandits, police were told, were white men. One was described as between 32 and 35 years old, about 5 feet 8, 160 pounds, with a round face, a dark complexion and a cast in his right eye. He was wearing a felt hat and a brown gabardine suit and tan topcoat.

The second man was about 39 years old, 5 feet 11 and 155 pounds. He had blond hair, was hatless and wore a light gray suit and topcoat.

Young 'Wisecrackers' Admit Holdup Series

Two buffooning young holdupmen, arrested early yesterday after three gas station jobs in a row, clowned around police headquarters as they admitted—still bubbling with wisecracks—a total of eight robberies between them.

For once they made everyone concerned with their little crime wave happy: Police listed the cases as solved, the holdup victims had the satisfaction of knowing their assailants were in custody, and police reporters had a picnic with the pair's dizzy actions.

But nobody—absolutely nobody—was made happier by the confessions of Samuel D. Wrightson, jr., 19, and James Albert Bell, 23, than one of their gas station victims.

He is Richard Quickel, of 5607 Kennedy st., East Riverdale, Md. He can now stop repaying his station's proprietor—via installments—the $100 Wrightson admits taking from him.

Congress Must Act Fast

Daylight Time Confusion Casts Its Shadow on D.C.

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Come Sunday, the time situation hereabouts will be like a Marx Brothers script—confusion compounded—unless the House goes into fast action this week on the Senate-approved daylight saving time bill.

Possibility of this was dim, since House leaders said the measure could come up only by unanimous consent this week or next. On May 8 it may hit the floor as a District Day measure.

The solons of Capitol Hill may have their admirers in the grass root country, but they had few among radio, television, transportation and recreation interests yesterday.

Here's why:

Making the trains run is never simple, but starting Sunday it will be tougher, Sidney Kerl, Union Station manager, declared.

Railroads, which traditionally run on standard time the year-round, have "spent thousands of dollars" revising schedules to meet the needs of travelers on daylight time, he said. This was done by the Baltimore & Ohio and Pennsylvania lines here on the assumption that the District would go on fast time.

Now the roads will have to use the new timetables, which advance the departure times by an hour in most cases, thus forcing Washington travelers on daylight saving time whether Congress says so or not.

Last night, however, both lines were considering changes in the new schedules so that commuters from nearby towns wouldn't arrive too early for work.

The Southern lines are unaffected, since most of their communities are not changing time, Kerl said, with some relief.

If you plan to go by bus, the National Trailways terminal advises schedules north to Baltimore and south to Culpeper will stay on standard until Washington goes daylight. The through hauls will be on daylight time.

The four Greyhound lines operating through the terminal here are undecided. "It's an almost impossibe situation now. We'll decide at the last minute," W. C. Beard, terminal manager, declared.

Airlines, for the most part, have received approval for new time tables affective Sunday which push up flights to daylight time cities by an hour. These will have to go through as scheduled, regardless of what happens here, officials stated.

Network radio stations plan to air transcriptions of shows from elsewhere, maintaining present schedules. Bill Herson, the WRC wakeup man, will cover all angles, giving the time both ways during his program.

Howard Stanley, general manager of WEAM, still smarting from the program juggling, advised "Congress to get on the ball and pass it (daylight saving time) for the next 30 years. This is foolishness."

Television outlets have tougher problems. It takes time and special equipment, unavailable here now, to "kinescope" a program, and the film must be delivered physically, rather than run over a wire, as in radio.

Station WNBW is considering putting the station on daylight time. Running programs a week after New York is also under deliberation.

Nearby Maryland and Virginia counties are playing follow-the-leader with Washington, and wish the city would make up its mind. They are pledged to go on DST as soon as, and if, D. C. does.

Arlington Woman Dies After Crash

Mrs. Nettie Frances Martin, 44, wife of Duval E. Martin, proprietor of the Martin Auto Body, Inc., in Rosslyn, died at 9:59 a.m., yesterday, of injuries received in an auto accident Monday night.

Mrs. Martin

Arlington Commonwealth's Attorney Denman T. Rucker said the driver of the cab, which collided with her 1947 convertible, would be charged with manslaughter.

Mrs. Martin, a telephone operator at the Arlington Village apartments, was hurt about 10 p. m. Monday, on her way home from work. She lived at 5740 Lee blvd.

Police said her car collided with a City Cab, driven by Gene Hamilton White, 25, of Bailey's Crossroads, at the intersection of S. 2d and Fillmore sts., Arlington.

Mrs. Martin was taken to Arlington Hospital with a fractured skull, and died there about 12 hours later.

White, whose condition was reported good last night, was also admitted to the hospital with head injuries. Two passengers in his cab, Pvt. Wilbur C. Ballard, 22, of Fort Myer, and Dortha Mae Mills, 26, of 5317 N. Carlyn Springs rd., were treated and released at the hospital for minor injuries.

Mrs. Martin, a native of Nelson County, Va., had been an Arlington resident since 1927, two years after her marriage.

Besides her husband, she is survived by two sons, Fred Martin, of the Lee blvd. address, and Andrew J. Martin, of 1802 N. Pierce st., Arlington.

Funeral services will be held Thursday, with burial at National Memorial Cemetery.

Two truck drivers escaped injury yesterday shortly after 5 p. m. when their trucks collided at Maryland ave. and 7th st. ne. Police charged both men with colliding. Each posted $25 collateral. They were William J. Logan, 28, of 1024 4th st. ne.; and Raymond J. Grace,

Guards Needed

D. C. Seeks $64,000 for Prison Aides

District Commissioners yesterday agreed to seek $64,000 for 20 extra guards at the Occoquan (Va.) Workhouse to keep pace with a sharp increase in prison population.

Donald Clemmer, director of the District Department of Corrections, reported the number of inmates had increased from an average of 679 for fiscal 1949 to an average of 1040 in March. Prisoners there are men convicted of misdemeanors in the District.

The workhouse is so crowded one guard is required to watch 40 or 50 men, Clemmer told the Commissioners, and 130 men are sleeping in dormitories built for 90. He reminded them that "crowding is always a potential for escapes and disorder . . ."

Clemmer told a reporter the situation has not yet caused any disturbances. The overcrowding will be somewhat relieved shortly, he stated, when a building now used for administrative purposes is made available for dormitory use.

Clemmer also reported increases —though not so large—in the number of inmates at the women's division and at the District Jail.

The Commissioners will seek funds for the additional guards in a supplemental request to the 1951 budget now before Congress, according to Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young. It would increase the number of workhouse guards from 71 to 91.

Civic Group Approves Bill For Home Rule

The Kevauver Home Rule bill was approved in substance by the Deanwood Civic Association last night, with the group reserving complete backing until a copy of measure could be read before the membership.

Opposition centered about discrimination against persons from a State living in the District. Other action in the meeting held at the Carver School, Whittingham st. and Lane pl. ne., included backing a petition of the Eastland Gardens Civic Association asking for the removal of the dump from the Eastland area.

Hampshire Heights

The Recreation Board received backing from the Hampshire Heights Citizens Association last night in its move to take over control of the District's swimming pools on a segregated basis.

The group, meeting at Barnard School, Decatur and 4th sts. nw., adopted a resolution to this effect last night. In other action, the association asked that cross walks be painted on the street at Gallatin st. and New Hampshire ave. nw.

Check Signing Duty Ends for Mayor Beville

No longer will Takoma Park Mayor Ross H. Beville be forced to undergo the arm-wearying task of countersigning all checks issued by the Maryland municipality.

The city council took care of this situation Monday night by rescinding any regulations which might require the mayor to pen his executive signature on checks.

Clerk-Treasurer Harold Hilliard, upon whom now falls the sole duty of check signing, said the city's charter requires only his signature, but custom has dictated the double authentication for some time past.

Mayor Beville, in office only a month, had complained to the council of the arduous task of signing "hundreds of checks for municipal expenditures."

Man Accused Of Murdering Stepson, 2½

Alexandria police yesterday lodged a murder charge against John C. Ferranto in the death of his 2½-year-old stepson at Alexandria Hospital early Sunday.

The 20-year-old electrician, held in jail for investigation since Sunday afternoon, was charged after police were told the child apparently died of a beating, according to Detective Inspector Russell A. Hawes.

The child, Donald Dee Ferranto was brought to the hospital about 1 a. m. Sunday and died as physicians were administering oxygen. Dr. John A. Sims, Alexandria coroner, who found bruises on his cheeks and buttocks, said death resulted from abdominal hemorrhages.

Inspector Hawes said Ferranto told police the child toppled from a chair in a coma about 11 p. m., Saturday. After trying unsuccessfully to obtain a doctor, Ferranto was quoted as saying, he took Donald to the hospital when the baby's mother, June, arrived home from work about 1 a. m.

Ferranto first attributed the bruises to a fall from a tricycle last week, the detective chief said. However, the coroner's report said the fatal injuries had been incurred only a short time before death.

Ferranto, who lives at 110 S. Fayette st., later admitted he had had "a couple of beers" Saturday night, but "didn't remember" doing anything to injure the baby.

Following filing of the murder charge yesterday, Ferranto was remanded to Alexandria Jail without bond for a preliminary hearing May 10

Albert J. Knott will address the Oxon Hill Lions Club at a 6:30 p. m. dinner meeting today on the Red Cross national blood program. A movie on the operation of the bank also is to be shown.

D. C. Officials Ask Today for Seven Million

District officials today will ask a House subcommittee to approve $7,273,033 in additions to the municipal budget for the fiscal year which ends June 30.

The executive hearing will be held by the House District Appropriations subcommittee, headed by Representative Joe B. Bates (D., Ky.) It will start at 10 a. m.

The budget additions are those forecast in the District section of the President's budget message in January, with some minor revisions. Most of the money is being asked to cover the cost to the District in the current fiscal year of the pay and pension increase laws enacted by Congress last year.

Principal Increases

Principal items were the $330 retroactive pay boosts for city employes, the Federal reclassification law, and the laws for increasing Municipal judges' salaries, and pensions of widows and children of police and firemen.

Requests for funds to cover the pay increase costs total $6,638,400.

Other major items as outlined by District officials include $142,400 to expand the Municipal Court from a setup based on 10 judges to one with 13 judges, and $231,141 for the Welfare Department.

The welfare increase would provide $44,800 to take care of an additional 60 children in the Industrial Home School Annex, about $92,000 for relief, about $46,000 for increased tuition of Welfare Board wards in Maryland and Virginia schools, and about $48,000 for operating costs of the National Training School for Boys.

Miscellaneous Requests

Among other items are $5000 to rebuild a wall of No. 10 Fire Engine House, 14th and Florida ave. ne; $10,000 for civil defense planning, $98,650 for increased expenses of the police department.

A simultaneous hearing, open to the public, is slated for 10 a.m. today on a bill to cut the police workweek here from six days to five. It applies to Metropolitan, Park and White House police. For the Metropolitan Police, officials say it would require 300 more men —and the annual cost would be about $877,000.

To attend Hearing

The hearing will be held by the subcommittee in charge of police legislation headed by Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.). It will be in room 445, Old House Office Building.

Witnesses slated to appear include District Commissioner John Russell Young, Major Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of Metropolitan Police; Inspector Hobart Francis of the White House police; Inspector Mark Raspberry of the Park Police; Inspector Clarence Lutz, of the Metropolitan Police, and Frank T. Gartside, of the Office of National Capital Parks.

Fight Looms Over Catoctin Manor House

Frederick, Md., April 25 (Special).—Catoctin Manor may become a cause celebre for this Maryland town.

The manor house, built in 1753, reputedly served as the home of Maryland's first Governor, Thomas Johnson. In the Catoctin Furnace Iron Works were manufactured iron plates which protected the Monitor in its engagement with the Merrimac. Here also, cannon and cannon balls for the Continental Army commanded by George Washington were made.

Now the Manor faces destruction by the National Park Service, which points out that the house is in a bad state of repair and has become a "hazard."

Although no date for its destruction has been set, Frederick townspeople have become so irate that they have taken the age-old remedy—they have written to their Congressman.

Representative J. Glenn Beall, of the Sixth Maryland District, is going to Frederick Wednesday to see how far Frederick folk want to go to protect the historic manor

The local fight is being borne by antiquarians, and by the city's chamber of commerce and the Frederick News-Post.

They point out that the house only fell into neglect after it was acquired by the Federal Government, at the same time the 10,000-acre Catoctin Recreational Area was purchased.

Attorneys for the National Park Service have advised Representative Beall that historic research has revealed the house has no historical significance. Local folk contend it does.

During the war, the Catoctin Recreation Area was the "Shangri-La" which the late President Roosevelt used in hasty, brief vacations from Washington. Since the war it has been used as a recreational area and as a summer camp for underprivileged children.

robbery, Quickel first told police that it was a holdup. Then he changed his mind; said it wasn't —that he was simply careless with the $100 to the extent of leaving it unguarded on a table at the gas station, 7801 Georgia ave. nw.

Wrightson, however, listed the holdup as one of his solo doings. In fact, he smilingly wondered how in the world police every got "that attendant guy" to say it wasn't.

With this information, District authorities returned to Quickel the $25 he was assessed for turning in a false report.

His boss, Paul L. Wroe, said Quickel can also stop paying $8 a week to replace the $100.

But why did Quickel change his story?

Well, police and Wroe say it was because Quickel was afraid of Wrightson.

Quickel said he simply got "tired" after 7½ hours of questioning by police and decided that he'd say it was his error to get out of further questioning.

Adding to an already dizzy situation were Wrightson's quotes concerning his activities.

Police asked if he worked. Wrightson replied:

"Yes—I hold up gas stations."

Why pick on gas stations?

"We picked on them because they're easy and—we just did it, that's all."

What did you do with the money?

"I took and used it to have a good time."

Wasn't he a house painter?

"Yeah—I 'shellac' gas stations."

Wrightson, who lives at 1214 N st. nw., and Bell, a cabbie, who lives at 708 4th st. se., were arrested in a cab driven by Bell, about 4:30 a. m.

At 2:30 a. m. they had taken $48 from Charles Wilcox at a filling station at 3800 Rhode Island ave., Mount Rainier.

At 3:20, they had taken $65 from Harry G. Nelson at a filling station at 1248 Pennsylvania ave. se.

At 3:35 it was between $80 and $90 from Ken Hudson at a gas station at 2305 Pennsylvania ave. se.

They were spotted in their cab at the last station, a lookout was broadcast, and the arrest was made at 11th and L sts. nw.

In all three jobs, the technique was the same, the pair admitted. Bell would sit in the cab while Wrightson went into the station. The attendant would be forced into a washroom.

Wrightson and Bell together also took $35 April 23 from Leslie J. Hoffman, attendant in a station at 3103 Rhode Island ave. ne.

Wrightson said he was working alone when he pulled these three gas station holdups:

April 5, $65 from Donald M. Urbas at 6350 Georgia ave. nw.

March 29, $50 from Harry G. Nelson at 1248 Pennsylvania ave. ne.

December 30, $60 from Charles Greer at 101 Florida ave. ne.

Mason to Assist In Survey Planned By Gordon Gray

Professor Edward S. Mason of Harvard, one of the architects of the Marshall Plan, is coming back to Washington to help plan American economic policy abroad after 1952, when the Marshall Plan ends.

He has agreed to start work on a full-time basis on May 16 as deputy to Gordon Gray, former Secretary of the Army, whom President Truman appointed recently to survey America's future economic relationship to the rest of the world.

As economic consultant to the State Department in 1946 and 1947, Mason played an important part in the work of the inter-departmental group that prepared the original Marshall Plan legislation.

W. A. Falconer Dies; Retired U. S. Employe

William Alfred Falconer, 77, who retired in 1946 after 40 years with the Coast and Geodetic Survey here, died Monday at his home, 1449 Parkwood pl. nw.

Mr. Falconer

Mr. Falconer had suffered from a heart condition. He had celebrated his thirty-fourth wedding anniversary with Mrs. Winifred Putland Falconer last February.

Mr. Falconer, a Government employe for 52 years, was born in Washington and served with the Post Office Department and the Geological Survey before joining the CGS.

He was a member of the Washington and the Federal Writers' Leagues and the Washington Readers' Club. He was a charter member of the Men's Bible Class at Calvary Methodist Church and a member of that church for more than 34 years.

He is survived by his wife, of the Parkwood pl. address.

Funeral services will be held today at 3 p. m. in the Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Favor Shown Cigarette Tax In Alexandria

Alexandria's City Council last night approved on its first reading an ordinance levying a 2-cent per pack cigarette tax as a step toward unsnarling a budget already more than $200,000 in the red.

Under the city's new charter, the ordinance cannot be presented for second and final reading until after a public hearing. The council set the hearing for its next regular meeting May 9.

If approved next month, the tax would become effective June 1. City Manager W. Guy Ancell estimated it would net $50,000 in the remainder of the year.

The measure was adopted by a five-to-two vote on the motion of Councilman Marshall J. Beverley, who first proposed the cigarette tax early this year. Dissenting votes were cast by Councilmen James M. Duncan, jr., and R. Samuel Luckett.

Under the ordinance distributors would be required to buy tax stamps from the city and attach them to each pack of cigarettes passed on to retailers. Distributors, presumably, would also pass on the tax.

The council appointed a three-member committee to work with three other groups in a study of parking and zoning conditions in the downtown area. The committee includes Councilmen Beverly, Luckett and Leroy S. Bendheim.

Appointment of the committee followed a lengthy statement by Bendheim, who asserted that "certain groups" in the city are so concerned with the preservation of old landmarks that they have effectively blocked progress.

Under his proposal, the committee would work with the local Chamber of Commerce, the Retail Merchants Association and the city traffic board in making the study.

The council also approved a resolution by Councilman Roy Bragg providing that city employes affiliated with reserve military units be granted 15 days a year to attend training camp. The resolution also provides that the city shall make up the difference in pay between the city scale and military compensation during the period of encampment.

Gen. Peek Burial Rites Set Thursday

Graveside services for Maj. Gen. Ernest D. Peek, 71, USA, ret., assigned here on several occasions, will be held Thursday at 2 p. m. in Arlington Cemetery.

Gen. Peek

General Peek died Saturday in San Fancisco where he had lived for the past 10 years, after taking over command of the Ninth Corps Area in 1940. He retired about seven years ago, and had been in poor health.

In Washington, General Peek's last post was in the office of the Assistant Secretary of War from 1924-27. Prior to that he had served in the Office of the Chief of Engineers in 1919 and was both a student and later an instructor at the Army War College. He became a brigadier general in 1937; a major general in 1940.

A native of Oshkosh, Wis., he was graduated from West Point in 1901. He participated in the St. Mihiel and Argonne-Meuse offensives in World War I, receiving a Distinguished Service Medal for operating railroads in the First Army sector under fire.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ann Peek of San Francisco.

Lena-Belle Chappell Dies; Ex-U. S. Aide

Miss Lena-Belle Chappell, retired Government worker with 28 years service here, died yesterday after a short illness.

Miss Chappell retired from service in the foreign and domestic commerce bureau of the Commerce Department in 1946. She had started her Government career in 1918 as an employe of the War Department and transferred to the Commerce Bureau in 1921. When she retired she was rated a statistician.

Miss Chappell was a native of Bradford, Pa., and a member of the Calvary Baptist Church here. She had been active in the Burrall Class since its organization.

Her body is resting at the S. H. Hines funeral home. Funeral arrangements are to be announced later.

Former D. C. Man Badly Burned as Stove Explodes

Pittsburgh, April 25 (AP).—A University of Pittsburgh chemistry student, who said he lived in Washington until two weeks ago, was seriously burned last night in an explosion that wrecked his apartment and shook a five-block area here.

The student, 20-year-old David Topping, was pulled from the wreckage. Hospital attendants said he suffered third-degree burns of the face and hands.

Police believe an accumulation of gas in a stove set off the explosion.

D. C. Heads Give Nod to Day Care

A District Commissioners' report yesterday advised Congress that Welfare Department operation of Washington's child day-care centers is preferable to Health Department operation.

In a letter to Senate District Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) the commissioners declared they do not believe continuation of the centers is justified, but that they will not oppose keeping them going for another year under the Welfare Department.

The six centers take care of up to 300 children. Their total budget for this year is about $148,000, of which the District's share is $100,000, with the rest provided by parents' fees. The law providing for the program expires June 30.

The Commissioners pointed out that the law limits the day care service to children of parents who are employed and financially unable to provide for the day care of their children.

"The Commissioners do not believe that the prpose for which these day nurseries and nursery schools was established justifies their continuation," the report said. "However, they will not interpose any objection to the enactment of the bill (to continue the centers another year) provided that the operation remains in the Board of Public Welfare."

The report referred to the draft of a bill for setting up a permanent district day-care center program under the Health Department, and added that the Commissioners oppose transferring the program to the Health Department "on any basis."

Hagerstown, Md., April 25 (AP).—Harry R. Rowland, bank president and retired minister, died tonight in Washington County Hospital as a result of injuries suffered in a local automobile accident Saturday. He was 74.

Rowland was president of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Hagerstown.

He retired from the ministry several years ago after 40 years' service as pastor of Long Meadow Church of the Brethren near here.

Mr. Rowland also was a trustee of Bridgewater (Va.) College.

Mrs. Grace Evans Dies; Widow of Colonel

Flu Robs Senate Ladies of an Honor Guest

By Marie McNair

MRS. TRUMAN, late victim of the flu virus, was unable to attend the luncheon given yesterday in her honor by the Senate Ladies Red Cross Group in the Senate caucus room at the Capitol.

Mrs. Truman missed the tea at Mrs. Martin Vogel's home last Saturday following the Goodwill House and Embassy tour, and has been confined to her room since then. She is expected to be released from the doctor's care in a few days.

The Senate ladies, who meet weekly during the congressional session to sew for the Red Cross, usually lunch in picnic style when their duties are over. But the annual luncheon in honor of the First Lady is always a special event.

Mrs. Alben Barkley, heads the group, as traditionally the wife of the Vice President is president of the organization. As such she was yesterday's hostess to the 110 guests, who included also the wives of Cabinet members and of the Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

Mrs. Estes Kefauver, chairman of decorations, and Mrs. Lister Hill, co-chairman, chose a pale green organdy cloth for the center table, with bouquets of white carnations, phlox and yellow snapdragons.

Hendrickson, Mrs. Kefauver and Mrs. Robert Kerr.

Guest found small white boxes at their places filled with tea cakes from Wichita, Kans.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 20, Is Eager to Share Many Experiences With Her Fiancé, But He Seems Most Interested In Lovemaking; She Feels Troubled, Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 20 years old, considered good looking, and engaged to Robert, who is 21. We have been going together for almost three years and I like so many things about him that it makes me eager to share many things with him; and yet I have a feeling that he would rather make love (neck) than do anything else.

I like to talk with him, work with him, joke with him and go places with him. And of course I like to make love with him, too; but I like to do all these things equally well, depending upon our mood. And although I am sure he likes our friendly exchanges, too, for he seems always to enjoy himself in my company, still I have the feeling that he would rather neck than do anything else. In fact he often says he could make love to me any time and all the time, and he says this even in a dispassionate mood.

Naturally when he kisses me he isn't content just to kiss, but he has to add a little petting with it, and the necking goes on to a point of greediness; just too much.

It worries me then, for I feel almost sure he doesn't love me, but loves to make love to me; and I have spoken to him about this many times, but he has no patience with the subject.

He tells me of course that he loves me, and that lovemaking is an expression of the love he feels; and I think it hurts him to have me doubt him. Or is it the truth that hurts?

I admit that my doubts are hard to explain, as he is gentle and considerate in everything with me; and I couldn't wish for him to be sweeter. His family never showed him much affection; his father none at all. Am I wrong to distrust his feelings for me? Please advise. K. S.

Infantile Basis to Man's Actions

DEAR K. S.: The young person whose family never has given him much affection tends to drift into autoerotic (or self-centered) habits of feeling; and in his dating experience this emotional inversion is apt to register in emphatic hunger for necking, because proximity to a sweetheart stirs up pernicious craving for close physical caresses,—an unfulfilled longing of terrific intensity, carried over from a love-starved infancy and childhood.

In general, boys and girls your age, who are accustomed to wholesome abundant love-nurture at home, have approximately your attitude in courtship, namely, a disposition to enjoy the sweetheart's company as much in one situation as another, without insistent desire to seize opportunity for sensual divertissement. Robert's abiding fervor on this score is less than healthy psychologically, and your dismayed reaction is instinctively sound.

In debating his emotional greed, you've made him uncomfortable because on the one hand conscience tells him your anxious distress is justified and that you'd be a fool to indulge his ventures; but on the other hand he feels unable to control his craving sufficiently to indorse your views and match your temperance. Ergo he "has no patience with the subject."

To the extent that he is capable of loving a girl, Robert loves you, I am sure; and in my opinion, his partiality to necking isn't necessarily a fixed hopeless handicap to a good affectional relationship.

But I think both of you need to realize that it is symptomatic infantile engrossment with physical sensation,—an unhealthy bias that can spoil a courtship or ruin a marriage, if sustained on the mistaken theory that it signifies manly vigor.

Since you plan to marry, my advice is to discuss the difficulty with a psychologist who can undertake firsthand instruction of Robert, to help him understand that he is exploiting your devotion, not expressing love of you, when he treats kissing as a preface to license. His refusal to admit that he is a problem in this respect amounts to making a bad matter worse; and it is fortunate for both that you are willing to invite a disinterested viewpoint. M. H.

Jobe Says...

Colored Velveteen Coat Is a Gay Accent

The new little colored velveteen coats are the gayest summer fashion we've had in a long time. Actually, the fashion started in Paris, where almost every dressmaker showed at least one colored velveteen coat in February. Most of theirs were longer—at least three-quarter length—but I think our pert little short coats are even better for summer.

If you can find them, choose one of the colors the Paris dressmakers used in their velveteen coats—the coral of Dior, Fath's light emerald green, Balenciaga's amethyst. But bright red, or gold or royal blue are just as gay and pretty and probably easier to buy.

Not a Fur Hat to Her Name

Hollywood, April 25 (U.P.).—The high cost of rearing a family has caused Joan Crawford to abdicate as Hollywood's millinery queen.

With four children, she says, she can't afford $250 hats now.

"I don't know how other women do it," the glamor-queen sighed. "But in our house, shoes and cod liver oil and steak and milk take just about all there is of the budget."

Her four moppets range from 10 to 3 years old, and next month she's adopting a 5-year-old boy. When the Crawford clan goes shopping for shoes the bootery can stop worrying about making a profit for that week.

Going on the chapeau wagon might not be revolutionary for some movie queens, but La Crawford is the girl who used to set the hat styles in Hollywood. She originated the pill box and the droopy brim and other fancy frills.

"I adore hats," she sighed. "Used to buy between 40 and 60 new ones every year. The average price was $80 or $90. When I bought a hat trimmed with mink the price went up to $250."

She hasn't had a fur hat, Miss Crawford added, since she adopted her last two children.

Women Voters Approve Home Rule, Skirt Civil Rights Issue

By Judith Crist

Atlantic City, April 25—The League of Women Voters today refused to take specific action on civil rights issues in the course of its 1950 to '52 program.

Two proposals for such action to be included in the forthcoming agenda failed to receive a necessary two-thirds vote from the almost 1000 delegates attending the league national biannual convention. Both received majority support.

Earlier at the second-day session of the five-day meeting, the delegates voted for continuing action in support of Federal aid to education and home rule for the District of Columbia, and in opposition to the equal rights amendment.

Special action on civil liberties was proposed by Mrs. Robert L. Mannheim, of Amherst, Mass., and Mrs. John B. Ramsay, jr., of Baltimore, Md. Mrs. Mannheim urged study and action for "protection of civil liberty by opposition to irresponsible and unprincipled attacks on public and private individuals, and by recognition of existing procedures which already safeguard national security."

Upon the defeat of this proposal, Mrs. Ramsey recommended that an item in the league's platform or basic statement of principle for the "protection of the citizen in his constitutional rights, especially those of freedom of speech, religion, assembly and press" be moved to the current agenda for study and action. This was defeated by a vote of 347 to 294.

A number of delegates explained their opposition to these proposals with the prediction that their adoption would "split the league right down the middle." Others felt that the items were too controversial for the nonpartisan league.

In an effort to preserve a concise program of action that could be effectively carried out on local and State levels, the national board had offered a change in the platform that would relegate the issues of Federal aid to education, home rule for the District of Columbia, and opposition to the equal rights amendment to passive status as a statement of principle rather than as issues for continued action.

The proposed change was defeated by a vote of 445 to 298.

The league's support of the Economic Cooperation Administration was acknowledged and praised by Paul G. Hoffman, ECA administrator. He emphasized that essentials for world victory over communism are the maintenance of a strong and prosperous America, the development of a strong and prosperous Europe and continuning union between the two.

Ladies' Night Banquet

1812 Society Spurns World Government

The National Society, United States Daughters of 1812, yesterday took a stand against world government and the proposed participation by the United States in the International Trade Organization. The patriotic Society also frowned on any change in the Charter of the United Nations which would interfere with the rights of secession from U. N. by the United States "should a tragic breakdown in international morality make such action . . . imperative for survival."

The society, meeting for the second day of a two-day convention at the Shoreham Hotel, also favored strong armament, research in all branches of the armed services and strong Alaskan defense. They urged the adoption of such of the Hoover Commission suggestions as would insure savings "without sacrificing efficiency."

The 58th Associate Council of the Society also urged Congress to vote for reduction in the appropriation bill now pending, "to the extent required to avoid deficit spending and to exert positive action for reduction of the Federal debt."

The two-day meeting was conducted by the president national, Mrs. Frederick Brewster Ingram.

PARRY—PHRASING

Oldtime Scandal Proved a Buried Treasure to Virginia Writing Team

By Ellen Buell Parry

Harris & Ewing

JAY AND AUDREY WALZ AND SONS KIT AND TERRY
. . . Terry hopes the book makes enough to take the family to Italy

EVER SINCE they were married 16 years ago, Jay and Audrey Walz have longed to write a book together. Last week they achieved that ambition when "The Bizarre Sisters" was published under their double byline.

The Walzes have both been writers since college days but the problem with them has been to find a subject that jointly interested mystery story writer Audrey and newspaper reporter Jay—who, incidentally, was with The Washington Post for six years and is now with the Washington bureau of the New York Times.

They clicked when they read a book review mentioning the old historical scandal involving Richard Randolph, his wife, Judith, and her sister, Nancy, who lived with them. Nancy had a baby out of wedlock which did not live.

Richard was accused of being the father, Nancy was accused of infanticide, and they were tried at the Cumberland County, Va., courthouse. They were defended by spell-binding Patrick Henry and John Marshall, later Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court.

The Walzes have worked nearly five years, running down every vestige of available information about the tragic affair. The writing was done in their interesting, small antique-furnished house on Lee st. in Alexandria.

"Are you still working on those old Randolphs?" asked 8-year-old Terry Walz one afternoon when he came home from school and found his parents still at their desks. "Well, all I hope is that the book makes enough money to take us to Italy."

Italy has great facination for Terry and his 11-year-old brother, Kit, because they are musicians. Like their father, they play both violin and piano.

During their research, the Walzes incidentally learned that a Sheraton desk they own—picked up at an auction in Chicago some years ago—probably belonged to the heroine of their book, Nancy, who later married Governeur Morris of New York.

DRUCIE SNYDER HORTON will act as mistress of ceremonies at the Pi Beta Phi luncheon at the Shoreham Saturday. Drucie and her two close friends, Margaret Truman and Jane Lingo, were all Pi Phis together at George Washington University.

Drucie, who resumed her radio work after her honeymoon, is an experienced commentator, and hence well suited for the role of mistress of ceremonies.

ONE OF the most interesting of the small houses on the Virginia Garden Tour this week, Mount Gilead, belongs to the Elmer Andrews. This place, in Fairfax County, 23 miles from Washington, is located on the road between Centreville (on highway 29) and Chantilly (highway 50).

Built in 1749 by Humphrey Peake, it was the first private dwelling constructed north of the creek beyond Fairfax Courthouse.

The greatest charm of this house is its simplicity, carefully preserved when it was restored in 1936 by Alvin Detwiler.

GEORGETOWN gals are ever ready to turn a penny to help their needy projects!

Theodore W. (Ted) Dominick casually remarked to Mrs. Warren Ege, chairman of the Georgetown Garden Tour to be given this Saturday, April 29, for Georgetown House, that he was sorry the tour didn't come during the convention of the National Architects Institute.

"Oh, I think we can arrange another tour for you architects," said Martha Ege without hesitation.

So, on May 13, there is to be an extra tour for the architects, and it will be open to the public as well. A different group of gardens, for the most part, will be included.

First Lady Is Boxholder

Mrs. Truman is a boxholder for the lecture by John Mason Brown, author and drama critic, which will be given at 4:30 p. m. on May 5 at the Mayflower for the benefit of the Frontier Nursing Association.

Mr. Brown will arrive early on May 5 to attend the National Cathedral flower mart and autograph copies of his latest book, "Morning Faces."

His lecture for the Frontier Nursing Service entitled "Seeing Things," is based on his column in the Saturday Review of Literature.

Others who have taken boxes for the lecture are Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mrs. Christian Herter, Mrs. Ralph S. Hill, Countess Szechenyi, Donna Julia Brambilla, Mrs. David S. Barry, Mrs. John W. Davidge, Myron Hofer, Mrs. Arthur Gardiner, Mrs. Harry Covington, Mrs. C. C. Morgan, Mrs. Edward Burling, Mrs. Irwin Laughlin and Mrs. Malcolm McConhie.

Can't Live on Love Alone, Proverb Says; So Better Feed Wedding Guests Well at Noon Reception

DEAR ANNE:
I am planning a small informal wedding with family and a few immediate friends present. Would it be necessary to have someone singing if you have someone playing music? What kind of refreshments would be served at the reception if the wedding is at high noon?
A. J., Front Royal.

Instrumental music alone would be lovely for the wedding. If the reception follows immediately after, something in the nature of a wedding breakfast or luncheon would be appropriate. This needn't be elaborate but the time of day does require the serving of a meal rather than simply light refreshments.

DEAR ANNE:
In cooking, when a recipe calls for sour milk and you have none, what is the best substitute? I have heard sweet milk and vinegar can be used.
S. W. J., Arlington.

For 1 cup of sour milk, you can substitute 1 cup of sweet milk plus 1 tablespoon vinegar or lemon juice. Or you can use 1½ teaspoons cream of tartar and 1 cup of sweet milk.

DEAR ANNE:
Is it necessary to keep opened jars of salad dressing in the refrigerator?
C. J., Washington.
It is wisest to do so to maintain good flavor. Do not let the dressing freeze, however, as this may ruin its smooth texture.

DEAR ANNE:
We expect to move to Sacramento, Calif., the first of August. Could you or your readers answer a few questions for me? Will we have any trouble finding a two-bedroom house or apartment there? What about television reception? Will we be able to get network programs?
Ann O'Brien,
4225 Tulane Drive, Hyattsville.

The housing situation isn't too encouraging in Sacramento now, though it has eased in recent months. Remember that California has been one of the tightest spots on housing, with an increase of 3,000,000 in population in the past decade. We've talked to a member of the staff of Congressman Leroy Johnson from that district and he suggests you write a real estate agent there, via the Chamber of Commerce, before going out.

As to television, he says the nearest transmitters are in San Francisco, 100 miles away. They do carry network programs, but reception in Sacramento is poor, requiring a 100-foot tower.

DEAR ANNE:
Can you tell me of anyone here who can cut a master pattern for me, to fit my figure exactly and to use in dressmaking for some time to come?
C. W. G., Alexandria.

A school of design located on F street here makes such master patterns. They take your measurements, cut a pattern and give you a fitting with the muslin pieces. The final pattern is cut from press board, a flexible, long-lasting cardboard. Charge for this service is $10. The telephone number of the school is Sterling 4383.

This Little Girl Goes Bump-Bump-Bump

By Richard L. Coe

DOES IT SEEM to you that sometimes the most amusing things on a theater bill are the unimportant, irrelevant folk who just happen to wander onto the scene?

In the Metropolitan's "Stage Fright," for instance, the liveliest moments seemed to me Marlene Dietrich singing "The Laziest Girl in Town" and Joyce Grenfell as the girl in charge of the shooting gallery. Both unimportant, but good, brief fun.

The same struck me at the Capitol, where Xavier Cugat's band holds down the top spot. The picture's a crime yarn titled "Side Street," with Farley Granger learning that crime does not pay, but even Headliner Cugat was eclipsed for me by two of his hired help.

More evident of these is a swaying female yclept Dulcina, off whom my eyes would not wander. Most of the full hour Cugat and his folks are on stage, Dulcina stands at the side, draped in something black and shiny, slit up the middle and fluffed about some kind of white material that gets to looking pink when the lights are romantic. Dulcina stomps about within a few feet of space, contained, as it were, only by an invisible wall, her agile, evident body going bump-bump-bump every instant. The Rhumba King certainly is doing his utmost to see that Dulcina's best foot is well forward.

The other of the Cugat outfit that amused me was one of the fellows in the band, named, as I got it, Bobby Kerr. This chap has a pleasing switch in the endless parade of impersonations that haunt our halls. He gives you "Begin the Beguine" as it might be sung by three types. First is one of those Frenchmen with a cigarette hanging from his lips, breaking up the lyrics into senseless snatches. Second is "The Voice with the Smile" one can pick up at boites and radios. Third is the amateur singer who goes off key every new phrase; it takes a good musician to do that. It's a brief contribution to the show, but it's neat, different and amusing.

The Cugat band is, as always, professionally Latin, so professionally so that I never fail to imagine a Flatbush accent. However that may be, the Cugat rhythms are lively, loud and lingering. Also on the bill is Wally Brown, of the screen, in an amusing monologue. All in all, the stage has the show this week at the Capitol.

"SIDE STREET" gets lost in its own complications . . . It concerns a young man on a small salary who wants his wife to have a more luxurious pregnancy than his finances allow . . . He gets a chance to steal some money, but it turns out to be some $29,800 more than he'd thought . . . The cabbage is linked up with a couple of murders and he comes close to becoming a corpse himself . . . The New York police, guided by Paul Kelly, pull him through, which is more than can be said for Script Writer Sydney Boehm . . . Granger is appealing as the young man and Cathy O'Donnell has only a few scenes as his understandably preplexed wife . . . The New York street scenes, especially the financial area of a Sunday morning, are nicely handled.

"THE TITAN," deserving the reception it's getting at the Dupont, prompts cheers from the friends of Director Richard Lyford . . . His re-editing job of the Swiss-made picture was done on a ridiculously low budget. . . . Washington knew him during the war when he made Army, Navy and Air Force film reports never released for general audiences . . . Now he's got two projects, a film on water conservation in Saudi Arabia for the Arabian-American oil company, and the other a film for General Electric on the country's dependence on the lowly boxcar . . . His forestry service film, "Dead Out," won an award last year at the Italian film festival.

KEITH'S you'll have to call "The Animal Kingdom." . . . Walt Disney's "Cinderella" animals propelled that one into a long-extended engagement and now "Francis," that one about the back-talking mule, won't go 'way . . . It's holding for a third week.

THE FAIRLINGTON Players are mighty proud of that musical revue they're presenting tomorrow and Friday nights at the Arlington Farms Recreation Center . . . Some hundred singers, writers, composers, dancers, artists and technicians have worked on the endless detail involved in mounting a musical . . . They make the point that while many are appearing with the young group for the first time, experience elsewhere has been the Sallies in Our Alley: Gene Fowler, the ex-managing editor who auth'd books about John Barrymore, Jimmy Walker and other front-pagers of his day, was complaining of his age . . . "Why?" he was asked. "Because of the young gang around Broadway these nights?" . . . "No," sighed Gene, "because of the old gang that isn't" . . . Some actors were discussing the planned musical version of "Anna and the King of Siam" . . . One said that Rex Harrison would play the role again "if he doesn't have to do much singing" . . . "What's he worried about?" hmf'd Maestro Lester Lanin. "A Rodgers and Hammerstein tune can carry itself."

Vignette: ABC's commentator, H. J. Taylor, sponsored by General Motors (those awful capitalists!), visited the editorial offices of The Daily Worker, the official newspaper here for Stalin . . . Taylor decided to go there on the spur of the moment as he motored near the 13th Street Kremlin . . . He simply walked in and asked for the editor . . . Just saw a lot of greasy people who had the same worried look . . . Scared the dickens outta them.

Memos of a Midnighter: Chas. Chaplin, about a month ago, was supposed to be on a hunt for a young dancer to appear opposite him in his next film. A new ruling by Internal Revenue is expected to play havoc with disc-jockeys . . . Airlines are busy trying to get crashes from being flashed over the networks . . . Jane Wyman has the hives . . . An Eastside spot was the scene of a near murder. A fellow was almost slugged to death in an off-side wing . . . Love Is Like This: Since John Talbot started romancing Fran ("Gents Prefer Blondes") Keegan he has given up wearing gold-rimmed specs.

New York Novelette: They told him he Didn't Have a Chance . . . Sure, he could sing and he was personable . . . But he needed Experience . . . The A-B-C of Psychiatry

Schizophrenia Is a Common Mental Ill

These articles are the answer to a question thousands of Americans are asking: "What is psychiatry and what does it mean to me?"

George Thorman, a director of the Children's Bureau, Marion County, Ind., is a veteran reporter of scientific and medical subjects. He prepared these articles in close cooperation with the National Mental Health Foundation.

The articles are a condensation of "Toward Mental Health."

By George Thorman

CHAPTER THREE

Everyone said Mary was headed for big things when she went to college.

She had been the best student in her graduating class in high school, seemed on her way to a brilliant career as a concert pianist. In the middle of her second year at the State university she failed in half her subjects. At the end of the year she was forced to drop out of school.

At home Mary was flighty, irritable, and moody. Her conversation came in jerks. She would start a sentence and then be unable to finish it.

She wanted to be left alone, wouldn't go out of the house, stayed up late at night reading, burst into crying spells. Her family called the doctor and Mary was sent to a mental hospital.

"Mary is a victim of schizophrenia," says the psychiatrist, "one of the most common forms of illness found in our mental hospitals.

"The word schizophrenia means 'splitting of the personality'. It is a good word for this disorder because it describes what seems to happen. These patients are physically in the real world, but mentally they are in a dream world of their own—they lose contact with reality.

"Mary won't eat, refuses to dress, seldom talks. She just sits all day long with her legs drawn up under her chin, gazing off into space. Lift her arm and it falls back lifeless and limp; talk to her and you get no answer—no response of any kind.

"Not all withdrawals from reality take this particular form. For example, one of our patients insists that she is the wife of a famous movie actor.

"Another patient believes that we are trying to poison him. No amount of reasoning will change these mistaken notions.

"The patient clings to them desperately because they satisfy an emotional need, and he cannot seem to check his ideas against the real facts. This does not mean that the illness is unreal. It is just as real as scarlet fever."

Mary was an unhappy, lonely child dominated by a mother who never let her play with other children. She made all Mary's decisions for her, kept her weak and dependent.

Consequenly, Mary was never strong enough to assert herself or rebel against her mother's tyranny. She may have wanted to rebel, but she could never bring herself to do it. The problems Mary faced and the strain they put on her emotional life were too great for her.

She had no friends to whom she could go. Her father was too absorbed in his own problems to give her any attention. Mary turned inward, withdrew completely from those around her, and finally broke under the load.

Doctors aren't entirely certain that this is a complete explanation of how schizophrenia develops. Some of them believe this explanation isn't the whole story and that someday we shall find an organic cause for schizophrenia.

Perhaps it is some bodily process we haven't yet discovered. Probably the cause will be found neither completely in the body nor entirely in the mind—but in both together.

Even though we don't know all about the causes of schizophrenia, it can frequently be cured. Cases like Mary's would probably have been labeled incurable 20 years ago. But medical science has developed new and more effective ways of treating schizophrenia. In many hospitals shock treatment—insulin or electric—and modified forms of psychoanalysis are bringing good results.

How does insulin shock work? Medical authorities are not agreed on this. Perhaps chemical changes produced by the insulin restore the proper balance in the mental and emotional processes. Perhaps certain brain cells are destroyed, new pathways made in the brain, and normal association reawakened to functioning again. Some day medical science will discover what lies back of this miracle, but today we can only marvel and theorize.

Shock treatment isn't the only therapy for patients like Mary. Work is one of the mainstays for rebuilding wrecked personalities. It helps the patient gain confidence in his abilities, gives him a feeling of importance and usefulness. Work prepares him for his return to the community and develops a sense of responsibility so essential to his recovery.

Council Plans Road Law Study

Montgomery County individuals and organizations wishing to make suggestions concerning the county's proposed new road ordinance may send them to the county council up to May 15, Council President Frederic P. Lee, announced yesterday.

Lee said the announcement was made in response to numerous inquiries from interested parties wanting to submit suggestions. He cautioned, however, that any recommendations must be kept within the scope of testimony given at public hearings on the proposal on March 11 and 14.

BMI Has Birthday

Surely All Listeners Remember 'Jeannie'

By Wayne Oliver

CHICAGO (AP).—Broadcasters last week lighted 10 birthday candles for their own baby, the music licensing organization Broadcast Music, Inc., born in the era of "Jeannie With the Light Brown Hair."

BMI was set up by broadcasters to obtain a source of music at a time when radio had been cut off from use of tunes of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishere—better known as ASCAP.

You probably remember the months when no hit numbers were heard on radio, but you got a heavy diet of "Jeannie" and other Stephen Foster tunes that were in public domain—no longer subject to copyright.

The industry and ASCAP had been unable to come to terms on renewal of licensing rights to ASCAP's tunes, with broadcasters contending their payments would have been doubled and that many of them would have had to operate at a loss.

Started From Scratch

STARTING from scratch, BMI got together a music catalogue by the end of 1940 that enabled radio stations to get by for most of the following year until they finally came to terms with Ascap.

BMI today claims 5 of the 10 currently most popular tunes.

BMI President Carl Haverlin and others of the organization were honored at several sessions of the annual convention of the National Association of Broadcasters at which BMI tunes were paraded.

Among the BMI numbers played were "Amapola," "Deep in the Heart of Texas," "Lay That Pistol Down," "A Doll That I Can Call My Own," "There I've Said It Again," "I'm Laughing on the Outside," "Cool Waters," "You're Breaking My Heart," "Rag Mop" and "Peter Cottontail." And, of course, they played "Jeannie."

Business to Stay

BMI doesn't claim to be as big as ASCP and a majority of the popular tunes you hear still are ASCAP melodies. Haverlin estimates there's about one BMI tune played on the air for each two ASCAP numbers.

But he says BMI, founded as an expedient, is in business to stay and its aim is "to maintain a free trade and a free market in music."

TELEVISION, as a keen competitor to the 50-yard line seats at the football stadiums, seems to be creating real concern.

Last fall the professional footballers sharply restricted pickup of their games to network TV relays in nonleague cities. Now an important Midwestern college group, the Bib Ten, has joined in banning TV except for 24-hour delayed newsreel films.

Notre Dame, not a member of the conference, sat in at the Big Ten parley, although it shortly before had signed a contract with DuMont to telecast five of its games for a second year.

Competition from television lies mainly in the fact that as a rule it gives the football fan a view of the play he could get in no other way, even with binoculars from the choicest seat in the stadium

Some Folks Just Listen Too Fast

Have you ever been the victim of this slick trick:

The prankster makes an obviously erroneous statement, and when you take the bait by correcting him, he insists he's right.

When your interest and insistence have been built to the proper pitch, he says:

"Let's make a little bet on it. If I'm wrong will you buy me an ice cream soda?"

You can't voice acceptance of the wager fast enough. Whereupon he smiles: "Okay, I'm wrong. Buy me an ice cream soda."

You thought he was going to say "if I'm right," so that's what you "heard," in spite of the fact that he said the opposite.

Silly? Maybe, but don't scoff until you try it. Not one person in 10 is sharp enough to catch the gimmick, unless he's already familiar with the trick.

By way of example, Betty Jean Porter of 8609 60th ave., Berwyn Heights, Md., tells me about an uncle of hers who runs a photo supply store.

Betty Jean says her uncle has a lively sense of humor, and as he waited on a customer the other day he quipped:

"Don't you think you'd better buy some flash bulbs before the price goes down tomorrow?"

NO SWITCH-HITTER HE

I am what you might call a right-handed gin rummy player.

Long sessions of playing them with my right while holding them in my left invariably leave the fingers of my left hand feeling cramped.

This worried me for a while, because I figured it was due to my advancing years and general debility. But now I find that I am not alone in this complaint.

Playing with a doctor last night, I paused after several hours to message my left hand. "Canasta thumb," diagnosed the doctor promptly. "A very common ailment these days—and I'm not kidding."

Frankly, I don't understand it. We were playing gin, not canasta.

I didn't see this mentioned in the news stories at the time, but there's a curious sidelight to the case.

I'm told that one of the drug firms accused by the FTC is a subsidiary of the Schering Corporation—which is owned by the United States Government. Schering's president is named by the Alien Property Custodian and its board of directors is named by the Attorney General, who is the official holder of the stock.

What I can't figure out is what can Uncle Sam do to Uncle Sam if Uncle Sam finds Uncle Sam guilty?

GIVE-AWAYS

"Pretty white female kitten, 11 weeks old." (North 4780.)

"Seven-week-old kitten." (Woodley 6114 after 6 p. m.)

"Mother cat and four 2-week-old kittens; 2-year-old male tiger cat, affectionate and gentle." (Wisconsin 8858.)

"Four 5-week-old puppies, two boys and two girls." (Falls Church 4186 after 5:30 p. m.)

"Four-year-old cocker spaniel, too good a watchdog for apartment, needs fenced yard or country home; loves children." (Falls Church 8189.)

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. N. C. Miller, 501 Domer ave., Takoma Park, Md.: Jim Hague, the erudite assistant city editor who chose the poetic precede for the cherry blossom story ("Loveliest of trees, the cherry now is hung with white along the bow") says he doesn't think it has a name. It's from A. E. Housman's "A Shropshire Lad" and is identified only by a Roman numeral, he says. But he ain't so smart after all, because he doesn't remember which Roman numeral.

Herb Harris, 1121 N. Kensington st., Arlington, Va.: No, I don't think Coak's drawings of me are supposed to look like me. They're caricatures, and good ones—just as the ones he does of himself. It must be an awful temptation for a cartoonist to depict himself as a handsome devil, but Coakley seems to feel that if others can stand a bit of ribbing from his sketches, he and I can, too.

COMPLICATED PLOT

Father spades the garden plot
And Brother rakes for hours.
Sister plants the seeds and says:
"Don't step on Mother's flowers."

Mary Ellen.

Film to Show Child's Mental Development

The Washington premiere of "Preface to Life," a Federal Security Agency-produced film on personality development, will be held at 8 p. m. Friday in the Department of Commerce Auditorium.

Prepared by FSA's Institute of Mental Health, the film dramatizes the development of a child's emotional background.

A discussion period will follow the showing, with Gilbert L. Parks, executive director of the Mental Hygiene Society of the National Capital Area, as moderator. Dr. Leopold Wexberg, director of the District Health Department's Bureau of Mental Hygiene, will speak.

The local Mental Hygiene Society, the Bureau of Mental Hygiene and the Junior Chamber of Commerce are sponsoring the public meeting as part of National Mental Hygiene Week.

Daniel Bell Chosen 'Citizen Of Month' Here

Daniel W. Bell, general chairman of the 1950 Red Cross funds campaign in this area, has been chosen "Citizen of the Month" by the executive committee of United Community Services.

The UCS, Washington member of the Community Chest Federation, announced the award in the current issue of "Red Feather Report" which was mailed out yesterday.

In the announcement, Frank R. Jelleff, UCS president, praised Bell for his leadership of the Red Cross campaign.

"The community," said Jelleff, "can be grateful to Mr. Bell not only for this major contribution, but for his leadership as president of the Community Chest Federation during a crucial two years, and his active participation on other civic fronts."

China Policy Fixed by Military

By Drew Pearson

Despite the hue and cry about friends of the Chinese Communists in the State Department, top-secret documents in the files of the Joint Chiefs of Staff will reveal that major decisions on China were made not by State Department advisers, but by hard-headed generals.

Pearson

The salty sea-dog, Admiral William Leahy; the sober military planner, General George C. Marshall, and their associates on the Joint Chiefs pushed the most far-reaching decision made by the United States on the Far East.

That decision, argued back and forth in the White House and the Pentagon for weeks, was to admit Soviet Russia to a partnership in Asia. Back of this were frightening military logistics and a lack of faith in the atomic bomb.

The somber argument given President Roosevelt by his most trusted military advisers was, "The invasion of Japan will cost 100,000 American casualties unless a Russian attack across Manchuria pins down every Jap unit on the mainland."

Simulanteously there were skeptical reports to the Joint Chiefs from General Leslie Groves, chief of the Manhattan District, which said the United States could not count on the atomic bomb to achieve major damage. Such leading scientists as Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer opposed Groves, pleaded that the new weapon could end the war, but Groves' view prevailed at the Pentagon in 1944-45.

That was why the Joint Chiefs were prepared to make major concessions to Russia to prevent overwhelming loss of life in the proposed invasion of Japan. In fact, they even agreed to give the U. S. S. R. Railway access to the Pacific, Baltic Sea and the Persian Gulf. This was much further than F. D. R. ever went at Yalta.

Decision on China

The decision that Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist government was a lost cause was recommended later by General Marshall after his disillusioning experience in China.

To a closed-door session of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, General Marshall explained: "American aid is not getting to the fighting forces. American recommendations are ignored. Chiang is an honest, if stubborn man, who is surrounded by independent war lords and thieves. I have seen Chiang give instructions in good faith that were never carried out down the line."

Last winter, a secret military intelligence report led to a decision not to send American military aid to Nationalist forces in Formosa. This report stated that a majority of the 6,500,000 Formosans look on Chiang and his Chinese as "carpetbaggers."

Hundreds of Formosans, the report stated, were ruthlessly killed in the early months of Chinese occupation in 1945. During any battle for Formosa, the natives would be unfriendly to Chiang and sabotage his operations. The report contended that the Chinese troops were in bad morale because they wanted to return to their homes and families on the mainland.

One "if" was appended on this decision. If Chiang would voluntarily surrender authority to the Formosans, then the United States should support an independent Formosa.

Note—An unpublished report by the Truman committee on corruption in China was responsible for President Roosevelt's distinct coolness to Mme. Chiang Kai-shek on her last visit to him. Harry Truman, then Senator from Missouri, advised FDR that as much as half of the American goods flown across the Hump and hauled across the Burma Road never reached the fighting fronts, and that one Chinese war lord was actually sending tungsten to the Japs.

Bedsheets For KKK

A delegation of prominent Jewish leaders called on Attorney General McGrath the other day. Led by B'nai B'rith President Frank Goldman, they presented McGrath with a copy of the Anti-Defamation League's explosive new book, "A Measure of Freedom."

In the course of their talk, Goldman, who hails from Lowell, Mass., asked the Attorney General, also a New Englander, to support a Federal bill outlawing interstate travel of masked or hooded klansmen.

McGrath, whose religion does not make him a Klan admirer, replied: "The bill makes sense to me."

Then he added, with a twinkle: "But we wouldn't want to do anything to interfere with the sale of bedsheets manufactured in New England, would we?"

Big City Crime

An eye-opening lesson on why big rackets operate so freely was given Senators by the model Mayor of Los Angeles, Fletcher Bowron.

The cheerful, round-faced Bowron set down three major factors:

1. Public apathy. "Thousands of bookies in Los Angeles," the mayor said, "are brought into the courts and given fines instead of jail sentences. They go right back to work. The courts reflect public indifference."

2. Corruption of public officials. In his own city, Mayor Bowron threw out any possibility of corruption by appointing as police chief the hard-hitting, efficient Marine Maj. Gen. W. A. Worton. I gave him a free hand," said Bowron.

3. The indifference of the Federal Government to some types of crime. Bowron brought up a little-known fact that slot machine operators point to their Federal licenses or tax receipts when local police arrest them and argue that they are condoned by Uncle Sam.

"I am not trying to shift the burden for stopping crime," Mayor Bowron explained. "I realize the local responsibility, but we can't stop the bookie rackets when the information that is their life blood comes across State lines."
